Drs. Boland, Childs and

Former Financier Is in Serious Condition.

The government today stands prepared to prosecute the mail fraud case against W. D. Manley, former president of the defunct Bankers' Trust Company, following action Monday of Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley in overruling a defense motion for continuance of the trial on grounds that the financier is "physically unfit" to appear in court and that the strain of court proceedings at this time would "endanger his life."

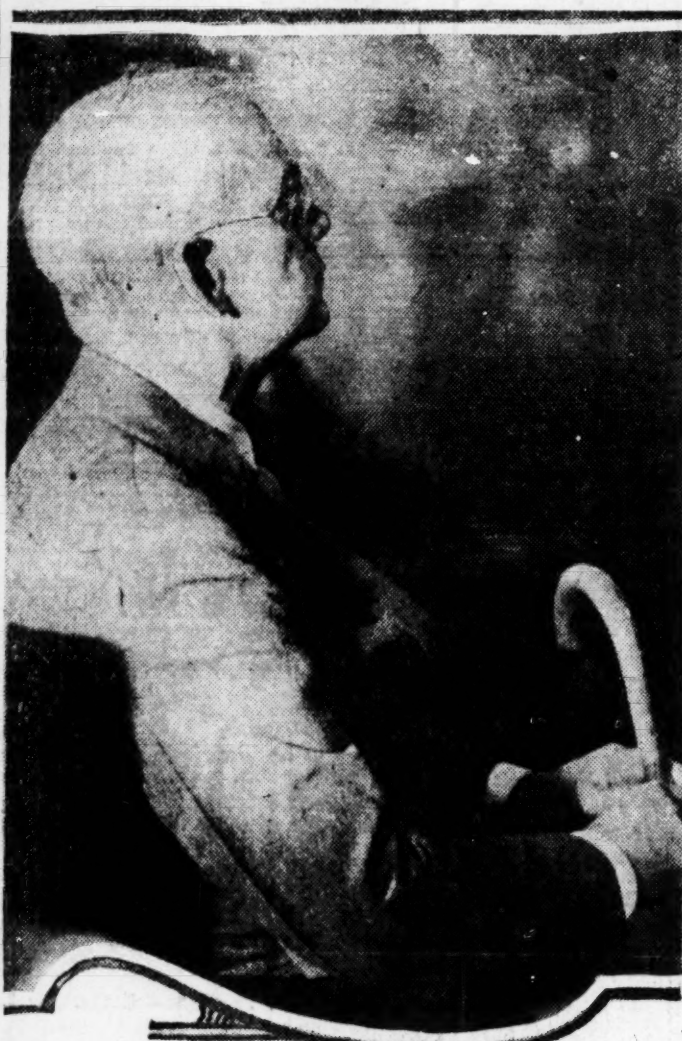

In announcing his decision Judge Sibley declared that on the strength of testimony by government witnesses as to the physical condition of the defendant he was convinced that Manley was "ill" but did not consider his condition critical enough to warrant a new delay in trial. At the conclusion of the judge's statement the former bank president's attorneys agreed to have their client in court this morning for the opening of the trial, which is set for 10 o'clock.

In requesting continuance, Marion Smith, chief of defense counsel, asked the court to appoint a special commission of three physicians to examine Manley so that "any suspicion in the minds of the court or the public might be allayed." Smith added that the defense would permit Manley to be moved from Allen's Invalid Home at Milledgeville, where he has been a patient for some time, for the examination, and would take no issue with any decision reached by the commission.

Upon request of United States District Attorney Clint W. Hager for a formal showing by the defense, Dr. Frank Boland and Dr. Leroy Childs, of Atlanta, and Dr. Richard Binion, of Milledgeville, were called to the stand. All testified to the effect that Manley was in a serious condition owing to hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure and dilation of the heart, and that excitement attendant upon a court trial probably would jeopardize his life.

DRY AGENT GUILTY FLOODS MENACE OF RAID SLAYING CITY OF HIALEAH

Grady Cobb, Convicted
by U. S. Jury of Shooting Fleeing Man, Gets Year Term.

Opelika, Ala., October 14.—(P)—Grady Cobb, Athens, Ga., prohibition agent was found guilty of second degree manslaughter by a jury in United States district court here tonight in connection with the death of Albert Edmunds, who was killed in June, 1927, during a liquor raid at Phenix City, Ala.

The jury took the case late in the afternoon and returned the verdict three hours later.

Federal Judge Henry D. Clayton sentenced Cobb to 12 months in jail, later in the Russell county jail.

According to testimony at the trial, Cobb headed the raid on Edmunds' house, assisted by Phenix City police. Cobb testified he was in possession of a search warrant at the time.

Prosecution witnesses testified Edmunds was fleeing from the house when he was shot by Cobb. Cobb, however, testified he and Edmunds fought in the house and that he shot the man when Edmunds drew a knife.

Cobb testified that he was continued in employment as a prohibition agent since his arrest.

He was first held on a charge of first degree murder, but this later was changed to murder in the second degree by the Russell county grand jury which indicted him.

Airplane Survey Shows Huge Lake Advancing on Town—Residents
Ready To Leave.

Miami, Fla., October 14.—(P)—Millions of acres of water, forming a gigantic lake slowly moving across country towards Miami and the country to the south was seen late today when G. Carl Adams, engineering head of Glenn H. Curtiss properties, made an aerial survey of the section north of Hialeah. He flew in a Curtiss Challenger airplane piloted by L. W. Botts, and was accompanied by E. A. Edwards, Miami Herald photographer.

From a height of 1,200 feet the section of south Florida lay as a silver sheet below the plane, the fliers said. In the center the Miami canal raced into Hialeah and Miami, overflowing its banks in many places.

The flood condition in the residential and business sections of Hialeah remains the same, with many stores and homes flooded. No general evacuation of the city had been reported to night and relief work was being administered by the American Legion.

The Miami city commission this afternoon appropriated an emergency fund of $21,000 for cutting a drainage ditch in the southwest section of the city to reduce the high water prevailing. This ditch will extend to Biscayne bay. A fund of $1,000 also was appropriated by the city for relief purposes and will be distributed by the Miami disaster relief committee.

The object of the aerial survey was to determine if the west dyke, some distance north of Hialeah, had broken, lying above the dyke, which holds back a two-foot rise of water. Mr. Adams discovered that the dyke had been broke in one place and the water was seeping over the top in two other spots.

The west dyke extends diagonally across the canal from northeast to southwest, connecting on the southern end with Red road, Biscayne dyke to the northeast of the canal is under water, and this water is seeping slowly toward Hialeah, the Opa-Locka section and Ojus, ten miles north of Miami.

Ernest Graham, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Sugar Company, near the west dyke, said tonight that his engineers had made frequent checks of the water level behind the dyke and last reports showed that the water was approximately two feet higher than sea level.

Mr. Adams said a level of one foot of water was being held up by the Tamiami trail and estimated that the water level to the east of the Tamiami trail was at least two feet.

The Miami canal at Hialeah tonight registered 8.11 feet and the water in the town site was on a slightly higher level due to the fact that the water inundating the town has come from the back country, from the rain-created lake.

Ninth-Inning Rally Transforms Apparent Defeat Into 3-2 Victory—Haas Hits Homer.

BY ALAN J. GOULD.

Associated Press Sports Editor.
Shibe Park, Philadelphia, October 14.—(P)—The dreams of the old master, Connie Mack, came true this afternoon when his youthful Athletics won the baseball championship of the world with a finish that packed all the thrills of a story book climax, all the nerve-tugging excitement of the final act of a melodrama.

Ninth inning of fantasy became the ninth inning of reality when the men of Mack, American league champions, surged from behind to score three runs and beat the Chicago Cubs, champions of the National league, 3 to 2, in the fifth and deciding game of the world series.

With the president of the United States and the first lady of the land to applaud them, joining the applause of more than 30,000 fans, the Athletics for the second straight game demonstrated their unconquerable spirit by rallying to a win after the game seemed hopelessly lost.

Miller's Winning Hit.

With two out in the ninth, Bing Miller, veteran right-fielder of the Athletics, drove the decisive blow to the score board, a two-bagger, that brought Al Simmons across with the winning run after George (Mule) Haas, raw-boned centerfielder, had tied the count with smashing home run over the right field wall as Max Bishop rested on first.

Miller's drive, with the count 2 and 2, spoiled the last desperate effort of the Cubs and their big right-hander, Pat Malone, in passing Jimmy Fox intentionally. It goes down as the $50,000 blow of the series, deciding the difference between the winners and losers' share of the spoils.

The finishing rally was not as devastating as the 10-run spurge of the Athletics in the eighth, but it was more dramatic because it settled the issue before the game had reached its climax. The Cubs and their big right-hander, Pat Malone, in passing Jimmy Fox intentionally. It goes down as the $50,000 blow of the series, deciding the difference between the winners and losers' share of the spoils.

Big Moment.

This was the big moment for the old master, Mack, as he saw his fighting young club slash through the gates of defeat in a defensive battle which the series by a margin of four games to one and give him his fourth world championship. Fate and a fluke of the last out, it seemed, were combined to make safe what is now a world's record for the 67-year-old leader of the Athletics.

No other manager in baseball has ever won four world's series. This was Mack's fourth in six tries since 1905, adding 1929 to the other victories of 1917, 1918 and 1922. John McGraw is the only other living man who has won as many as three world titles, the mark which the late Bill Huggins also attained with the Yankees.

There didn't seem more than the remotest chance for the Athletics to today day after they had been held to two hits for eight innings by the fast balls of big Pat Malone and after Wally French, pinch-hitting for George (Rube) Wallace in the ninth, had struck out. The Cubs had driven the hero of the first game, Howard Ehmke, out of the box in the fourth inning with a vicious attack, after two were out. The rally produced two runs and what looked like a secure lead as Malone moved down the Mackmen.

Not Beaten Till.

If it hadn't been for the memory of that "lucky seventh" Saturday, the crowd might have given up hope entirely when French fanned. It wasn't in the cards for anything like that rally of the fourth game to be won.

DEATH OF VAUGHAN REMAINS MYSTERY

Inquest Into Shooting of Cafe Man Fails To Shed
Any Light on Hotel Slaying.

The mysterious fatal shooting of James H. Vaughan, former cafeteria owner, in an Atlanta hotel, remained unexplained Monday after a coroner's jury returned a verdict stating the jury's inability to determine whether Vaughan's death wound was self-inflicted or was inflicted by another person or persons.

Vaughan was found fatally wounded in a room of a downtown hotel last Tuesday and died several hours later in Grady hospital. The wound had been inflicted with a .22 caliber rifle, the bullet lodging near the spine.

Testimony at the inquest conducted by Coroner Paul Donehue was not conclusive enough for a verdict of either suicide or homicide, it was said. Witnesses told of alleged threats against Vaughan by a woman and by several negroes.

A. A. Baumstark, attorney, represented Vaughan's family at the inquest and conducted cross-examination of a number of witnesses.

Rifle Is Identified.

Dr. G. W. Willett identified the .22-caliber rifle found in Vaughan's room, and told the coroner's jury that Vaughan borrowed the weapon from him to go hunting. The gun was borrowed the day before the shooting, with a promise that it would be returned two days later, Dr. Willett said.

The hotel maid said that when she opened Vaughan's door at 7 o'clock on the morning of the shooting, there was no light in the room. She returned to the room between 9 and 10 o'clock, found the door unlocked and the light turned on, the maid said. Vaughan was on the floor with his body resting against the bathroom door, she testified.

A hallway called by the maid saw Vaughan's body and told her to lock the door while he called the floor in distress. Meanwhile the hotel clerk came up to the room, unlocked the door, and found Vaughan on his knees 12 feet away from the bathroom door, the clerk testified. Vaughan had the barrel of the gun in his left hand, and fell forward as the clerk looked into the room, he said. After placing Vaughan on the bed, the clerk found an empty cartridge near the body, it was testified.

Regains Consciousness.

Vaughan was unconscious, but regained partial consciousness at the hospital and told inquirers, four times that he had not shot himself, it was testified. Vaughan was said to have stated that he did not know who shot him, and that he was asleep when hit by the bullet.

Detective A. G. Stone testified that when he reached the room, he found a suit of clothes on the hall tree, with two cents in a pocket, and a watch chain but no watch. In a handbag were four shirts and a new box of rifle shells, out of which one was missing, Stone said. The gun was a single shot rifle without an automatic ejection, he testified. Scraps of paper found in a waste basket in the room were placed together by the de-

Premier of Britain Says
He Has Grown To Love

sue Farewell.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., October 14.—(P)—After an all-day ride on a special train from New York, Ramsay MacDonald, the British premier, arrived here tonight for an overnight stay before crossing into Canada tomorrow for conferences with Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

At Ottawa Thursday the two statesmen will have a long personal conversation in Mr. King's country place and in an address in the evening Mr. MacDonald is expected to make an announcement of importance relating to one phase of the situation growing out of his conferences with President Hoover.

During his train ride, the British prime minister prepared a farewell message to the American people, to be made public tomorrow before he crosses the international boundary. The prime minister declared in an address tonight that he was leaving the United States with real regret in his heart and that he would like to have remained longer on American soil.

"I would like to have seen more of you," he said in a brief talk at Hollywood, went to a hotel. She was questioned later by federal authorities and they were satisfied with her explanation. But the finding of the body today with a bullet wound brought in the state authorities.

Epstein said he had known Kraft a long time as he had made frequent sea trips, and expressed amazement at the bullet wound. He explained that he and Miss Ord were sitting on deck around midnight when Kraft came up the stairs from below, waved his hand, shouted "So long," and gave overboard. He was wearing a bathrobe, he added.

The girl was a nervous wreck when she confronted the district attorney. She had no explanation for the bullet wound or of Kraft's death. She fainted once but quickly recovered. Asked to describe Kraft, she took a pencil and drew a sketch, saying: "That's like him."

LONG-SMOULDERING REVOLT BREAKS OUT

Hoovercrats Claim
Brown's "Unofficial" Group Treated Them
"Shamefully."

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Washington, D. C., October 14.—President Hoover tonight was threatened with a general revolt in the ranks of southern organization leaders, who functioned in the successful campaign waged in the south in behalf of the republican ticket last fall.

In a lengthy statement bristling with criticism of the unofficial committee appointed by President Hoover to deal with southern patronage affairs, Chairman E. E. Callaway, of the republican state central committee of Florida, announced here today that a proclamation would be issued within the next 30 days, calling together a conference of southern republican and Hoovercratic leaders for the purpose of securing control over republican party activities in the south.

The proclamation, Callaway's statement said: "Will be issued by one of the south's most beloved sons, a man who is a true and loyal republican and an unquestioned friend of President Hoover and the administration."

While the identity of the person to issue the proclamation was not given, it was learned later that it is none other than Colonel Horace Mann, of Washington and Tennessee, manager of the Hoover-Curtis campaign in the south last fall—a fact which gives added significance to the movement. Chairman Callaway and some of the others involved admitted as much.

The Callaway statement, it developed, was framed after a series of conferences of southern leaders who have taken pointed exception to the manner in which President Hoover has turned over the direction of southern patronage problems to the unofficial committee composed of Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown, James Francis Burke, counsel to the republican national committee, and Walter Newton, one of the official secretaries to the chief executive.

It was issued, in fact, from the headquarters of Glenn B. Skipper, republican national committee chairman from Florida, with whose organization Skipper, long known as the leader of the Mann organization in Florida, has been openly at odds.

Fingerprint Test Is Urged For All College Applicants

GOVERNOR HARDMAN STRESSES VALUE OF PHYSICAL TESTS

Governor L. G. Hardman was the principal speaker on the annual Emory university banquet program Monday night at the Candler hotel, DeCatur. More than 300 students and faculty members gathered around the board to hear the state executive speak concerning the basis for a standard of citizenship for this country. The event was sponsored by the Emory Y. M. C. A.

"The Fingerprint Test," a satirical play on modern play writing, presented by a group of LaGrange college girls was the chief entertainment feature. The play was a comedy, almost entirely of the male members of the student body, received the drama enthusiastically.

Dr. J. Sam Gyr, of the chemistry department, was toastmaster of the occasion. Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory made a short talk. The invocation was delivered by Dean Franklin N. Parker, of the Candler School of Theology.

The use of finger prints in determining the fitness of a candidate for matriculation at the schools of this country was urged by Governor Hardman in an address in which he offered what he considered a basic element of good citizenship. He complimented Emory and Mercer for more nearly solving the problem of a basis of admission into institutions of higher learning than any other institutions in America.

Determination of the mentality of persons seeking admission into an institution of higher learning through psychological tests was the first of the essential standards which should be set up by colleges and universities, he said. Something more than the presentation of 15 Carnegie units of high school work should be required, the governor stated.

Specific detailed records of the physical condition of such candidates should also be made, the executive said. The determination of character through standardized tests which have been reduced to 15 points supplemented by character education was the third point suggested by Governor Hardman for insuring into the American educational system.

Finger print records of candidates seeking admission into institutions of higher learning should supplement the tests for mentality, physical build and character, the speaker said. The relationship between mentality, physical manhood and character can be identified in the finger print records, he declared.

The dramatic production was given under the direction of Miss Margaret Chester, head of the expression department of LaGrange college. The stage manager was Miss Mildred Stipe. The cast included: Miss Gardie Davis, LaGrange; Miss Matilee Dunn, Manchester; Miss Elwyn Wallace, Lafayette; Miss Evelyn Powell, Miss Inez Bartlett and Miss Carolyn Hairston, LaGrange.

Arrangements for the banquet were under the direction of Clarence Stauffer, of Atlanta, president of the Y. M. C. A.

monoplane, which was smashed some weeks ago when a plane ran amuck at Candler field, arrived Monday and mechanics at once began the work of putting it in place. The ship, which is a four-passenger cabin job, powered with a Wright Whirlwind of 225-horsepower, should be back in service this afternoon or early Wednesday morning.

During the first six months of their operation, the three passenger lines of Southern Air Transport, Inc., transported 3,400 passengers 724,475 miles. Victor F. Grima, general traffic manager of this second largest subsidiary of the Aviation Corporation, announced from Fort Worth Monday.

"Passenger traffic has increased rapidly from month to month, doubling in some instances," Mr. Grima said. "It is hardly to be expected that it will continue to increase at this rate indefinitely, but so far there has been no indication of a let-up. Ever since August 1, when the fare was reduced, there has been a sharp increase in patronage."

Not only were all these 3,400 passengers carried during the last six months without a single one being so much as scratched, Mr. Grima said, but all told, in the regular course of business, Southern Air Transport, Inc., has flown two million miles carrying mail, passengers and express, and in training students, without an injury to anyone. This mileage, he explained, includes taxi and sight-seeing trips. "Flying an averaged speed of 92.1 miles an hour, the passenger planes flew 98 per cent of the miles they were scheduled to fly," Mr. Grima said.

"A present-day mail plane such as the Boeing '45' is in marked contrast to the equipment we had when I entered the air mail," Wagner said here Monday. "In early days of airmail our maximum load was 400 pounds and our cruising speed 90 miles an hour. Today, with a 525-horsepower 'Hornet' engine, I can carry 600 letters, or four-fifths of a ton of mail, at a high speed of 142 miles an hour and cruise at 120 miles an hour."

School Merger Hearing Planned This Afternoon

A public hearing on the proposed merger of the city of Atlanta and Fulton county school systems will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon by the county board of education in the courtroom of the county commission.

Both sides of the merger question will be heard, and a large number of delegations, some supporting and others opposing the merger, are expected to attend. W. E. Taliaferro, chairman of the county board, will preside. Members of the county board have expressed themselves as not wishing to act on the matter of calling for the special election on the merger question without first hearing from the public. The decision of the board will rest on what the people want, it was said. The legislature authorized the county board to call for an election on the question, the election to be held by city council on the request of the county board.

Old Customs and Modern Business Mingle In Magnetic Manner in Rogers Stores

THERE have been many changes in the physical structure of the nation. Majestic cities stand today where a few decades ago stood wide rolling plains.

Old things have given way to new.

Modern methods supplant the more or less crude and haphazard methods of a few generations ago.

Atlanta is one of those graceful tributes to modern advancement and to the industry and loyalty of its citizens. Those who have been attracted to this metropolis of the South have been imbued with the same progressive spirit—have entered loyally into the upbuilding of Atlanta. Millions are invested where dollars once represented capital. Thousands go about their duties where once dozens went through their daily tasks.

But there are some things that remain unchanged—the spirit, the courtesy and hospitality, the broad vision and intense pride of being residents and extending this hospitality to the visitor and investor—these still are dominant traits of Atlanta. These are the old customs that still prevail.

The Rogers stores, too, have kept pace with fast growing Atlanta.

Where three score years ago a solitary store served a few people, today there are more than a hundred and sixty stores and ninety meat markets serving thousands each day in Atlanta. In addition there are more than this number serving the people in the states of Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina. Today it is a great organization serving thousands upon thousands where once there was only a lone man with a fixed ideal.

And in all these years that ideal has never changed. The old customs and courtesies, the old habits of fair and square dealing, the idea of SERVICE is still dominant.

Service, after all is paramount. It means safeguarding the quality of merchandise, selling at a fair price and giving the people the benefit of buying economically. It means assisting civic and charitable enterprises. It means looking after the welfare and contentment of more than twelve hundred employees.

Today merchandise is more standard. Buying is done scientifically. Modern methods prevail. And it is thus that old customs and modern business harmoniously mingle in Rogers stores. This makes buying pleasant. It leaves a friendly glow and a warmth that cannot be forgotten.

Rogers stores have expanded and grown with Atlanta—and the South—because they adhered to the same principle on which they were founded, seeking to render the same type of service to the many thousands they serve each day, giving the housewife clean and attractive stores in which to shop, employing men of intelligence who see a future for themselves in this fast growing organization, selling foods and meats of tested quality at prices that make shopping doubly attractive—all of these features have won a host of friends for the Rogers stores all over the southern states where they serve.

But there are other reasons.

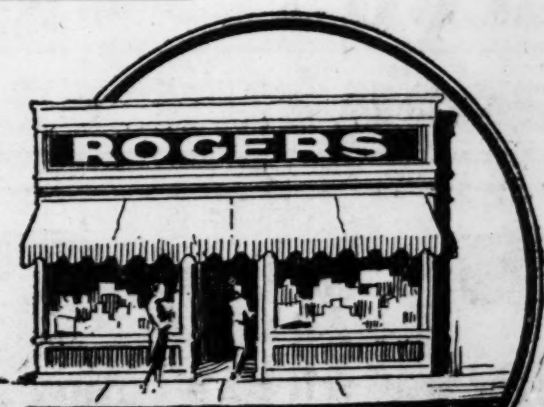

The Rogers stores—or the men behind the Rogers organization—have always been intensely interested not only in Atlanta's civic affairs—in her growth and development—but interested in the great Southern section over which our stores are spread. Its purchases are made, wherever possible, from Atlanta and other Georgia and Southern manufacturers and producers. Community funds, charities, chambers of commerce, practically all undertakings of a civic or community nature, as well as churches, schools and other deserving institutions, have been given support, and given wholeheartedly. This support has not been confined to Atlanta, but extends over many Southern States.

Many Southern states—particularly Georgia—are greatly benefited by the Rogers organization, not only in taxes, rents, salaries and other expenses, but by the Rogers policy of assisting the Georgia farmer, the Georgia producer and manufacturer, and the Southern producer and manufacturer, in every way possible.

From one small store to hundreds, serving three states! An enviable record—one to be proud of. But those men who have grown with the business—and are still conducting its affairs—are still imbued with the same spirit of progress and initiative that has kept Atlanta—and Rogers—in the foreground. The names "Rogers" and "Atlanta" are closely allied. Each has kept pace with changing conditions, but their own personalities that made them great are still their greatest assets.

ACTION ON CITY HALL TO BE TAKEN MONDAY

Special Council Session on Lease Will Not Be Called by Mayor Ragsdale.

Hope of consummation of the lease of the present site of the Atlanta city hall before next week faded Monday when Mayor I. N. Ragsdale declared he would not call a special meeting of city council to consider the paper.

Council meets in regular session at 3 o'clock next Monday afternoon and the matter will not come before the body prior to that date, because of a notice filed at the last meeting that a motion for reconsideration would be made.

Council voted 11 to 6 to award the lease to Carling Hotel Company, Inc., for 65 years for an aggregate net rental of $3,550,000.

At that time Palmer, Inc., had a bid on the property for 65 years for $3,250,000, out of which a real estate fee of $28,047 was to have been paid. Palmer interests, however, guaranteed to erect a building costing not less than $2,500,000 on the tract.

Under the Carling agreement it also will construct an improvement to cost not less than $2,500,000, which it must guarantee within 90 days after the award is made to the company or forfeit a $50,000 bond.

Councilman James L. Wells, of the eighth ward, and George Lyle, of the eleventh, filed notice that a motion would be made to reconsider the award at the session of council at which the contract was voted to the Carling interests. That move automatically deferred action by the aldermanic board.

Mr. Lyle already has filed notice in writing with City Clerk Walter C. Taylor that he will withdraw his motion to reconsider, this action automatically sending the paper to the aldermanic board for its consideration.

C. F. Palmer, of Palmer, Inc., has filed official notice with Mayor Ragsdale and city council that his company has withdrawn its bid in order to expedite erection of the $2,500,000 building by Carling Hotel and his associates, who compose Carling Hotel Co., Inc.

KILIAN SPEAKS TODAY ON 'JUBILEE' PROGRAM

Other Addresses Planned
memoration.

With two addresses today opening the speaking program in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the invention by Thomas A. Edison of the incandescent light, the general committee in charge of Atlanta's participation in "Light's Golden Jubilee" announces plans for several other addresses during the remainder of the commemoration.

C. M. Kilian, executive secretary of the southeastern division, National Electric Light Association, will inaugurate the speaking program when he delivers a tribute to Edison in an address before the annual convention of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Ansley hotel. At 6 o'clock this evening Mr. Kilian will deliver a similar address before the American Business Club dinner at the Henry Grady.

Other city organizations before which speeches are planned are the Kiwanis Club next Tuesday and the City Club Thursday week. P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, will deliver an Edison talk before a joint meeting of the Civilian and Lions Clubs to be held October 29 at the Henry Grady. At this luncheon the Lions will be guests of the Civilian Club, which organization boasts the aged inventor as a member.

Announcements will be made before the weekly luncheons of the Rotary Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce this week, explaining the nature of the great tribute.

A tour of the downtown area will be made tonight by judges in the window-trimming contest sponsored by the general committee which is offering three cash prizes of $50 each for the most attractive, the most original and the most artistic windows trimmed by local merchants as their part in the local celebration. It is planned to announce the winners before noon Thursday.

PLANT QUARANTINE OFFICE IS OPENED BY GOVERNMENT

The U. S. department of agriculture has opened a branch office of the plant quarantine and control administration in the offices of Manning S. Yeomans, state entomologist.

The primary purpose of the new office will be for work in connection with phony peach eradication, but activities will be extended to include other fruit and vegetables. The establishment of the new office will not affect that of the office now handling the Mediterranean fruit fly work, it was stated.

G. W. R. Davidson, of Washington, D. C., will be in charge of the new office.

CITY HALL REPORTS ONLY 4 PICTURES OF MAYORS MISSING

Pictures of only four of Atlanta's long list of mayors will be missing from the executive gallery when the photograph of Thomas F. Lowe, who held the post in 1861, is added to the group, it was announced Monday.

Miss Nellie Richter, of Madison, advised Mayor I. N. Ragsdale Monday that she will send Mr. Lowe's picture to be placed in the mayor's suite. She also will send two silver goblets presented to Mr. Lowe, who was one of her relatives, while he served as Atlanta's chief executive.

The four former mayors' photographs still missing are: Moses W. Formwalt, this city's first mayor, in 1848; Willis Buell, 1850; Thomas F. Gibbs, 1852, and John F. Mims, 1853.

CANDY COMPANY OFFERS PRIZES FOR WRAPPERS

The Block Candy Company announces $200 in prizes to be awarded to persons saving the most wrappers from the Starlight bar, a product recently placed on the market by the company. The contest is open to all, according to Brooks Morgan, president of the company, and the prizes will range from $20 to $50. In addition to the cash prizes, many boxes of candy will be awarded. The new candy bar is on sale at many groceries and drug stores, and details as to the rules and regulations governing the contest may be had at any of these places.

Another Bright Day Promised By Weatherman

Another day of pleasant weather, with bright skies and no change in temperature, was promised Atlantans in the forecast for today by C. E. von Herrmann, meteorologist of the United States weather bureau here.

The rainfall indicated for the past week-end gracefully withdrew its insinuations, and prospects are that fair weather will prevail until the latter part of the week, the weather man stated.

Temperature Monday ranged between 57 and 70 degrees.

BRITISH TEXTILE MAKERS WILL SEE AMERICAN PLANTS

New York, October 14. (P)—Twenty-one leading Irish and Scottish textile manufacturers arrived today on the liner Laconia to begin an industrial tour of the United States as an official delegation suggested by the Prince of Wales.

The group is known as the Irish and Scottish linen industry delegation and includes proprietors of the principal linen mills of northern Ireland and Scotland, who have come to this country to study modern American merchandising methods with a view to applying them to British industry.

CITY TAXPAYERS ARE GIVEN FOUR DAYS OF GRACE

Atlanta taxpayers Monday were given four days of grace in which to pay 1929 taxes and avoid penalties when Mayor I. N. Ragsdale asked that the time be extended because of two holidays last week.

Books were scheduled to be closed today, but assessors stated they would keep the office open and receive payments through noon Saturday.

Long lines of citizens filled the city hall first floor Monday making their payments. The office was crowded that every one of the attaches was assigned to windows to assist in handling the business of the office.

Checks mailed in letters postmarked before noon Saturday also will be honored and no fi. fa. penalty will be assessed, it was said.

PHILP AND HEATH WILL NEGOTIATE POSTOFFICE SITE

John W. Philp, assistant postmaster-general, and Perry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, will arrive in Atlanta Wednesday to open negotiations for location of the proposed new federal building here, according to announcement Monday by Postmaster E. K. Large.

Philp and Heath were originally scheduled to arrive in the city Monday but were detained on business.

BASKETS COSTING $73 EACH TOO RICH FOR CITY'S MAYOR

Waste paper baskets that cost $73 each and cuspidors which cost $55 apiece are too rich for the blood of Atlanta's mayor, I. N. Ragsdale. He told newspapermen Monday, "I guess I can use the same basket in the new city hall that I am using here."

Specifications for the mayor's suite in Atlanta's new $1,000,000 city hall includes this expensive equipment among others in a list amounting to more than $2,000, exclusive of rugs, draperies and decorations.

PRESIDENTS' CLUB WILL PAY TRIBUTE TO COL. SAM TATE

MODIFY FLORIDA FRUIT REGULATIONS

Eight Areas, However, Still Remain Under Old Rules.

Jacksonville, Fla., October 14.—(P)—Modified regulations for shipment of fruit from all but eight small areas in Florida, in connection with the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly, were adopted at the monthly meeting of the Florida state plant board here today. The eight areas, located in Citrus, Lake, Marion, Putnam, Pasco, Hillsborough, Flagler, and St. Johns counties, remain in some one. The new regulations will coincide with a modified group of rules announced by the United States department of agriculture at Washington Saturday.

P. K. Yonge, Pensacola, chairman of the state board, said that the action by the agriculture department had been taken at the request of the state plant board, but that state regulations could not be changed until action had been taken at Washington.

Under regulations of the department of agriculture and the state plant board, fruit destined for points north-east of Potomac yards, Virginia, may now be shipped from all parts of the state outside of the eight infested areas. Other requirements of the fruit fly quarantine under state as well as national regulations remain unchanged. They include sterilization of fruit produced in the eradication area as a whole unless it is destined for points northeast of Potomac yards. No Florida host fruits or vegetables sterilized or unsterilized, is permitted to be transported directly or indirectly into any of the 18 southern and western states listed in the quarantine.

The next monthly meeting of the board will be held in Gainesville.

GRAND DUKE UNDER GUARD AFTER THEATRE

Boston, October 14.—(P)—A police guard was established about the suite of the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia, at the Ritz-Carlton hotel here today while the detectives endeavored to trace a telephone threat against his life.

The threat was reported by a maid at the home of Mrs. Curtis Guild, widow of the former governor of Massachusetts, who is one of the chief sponsors of the lecture the grand duke is to give tonight for the benefit of the Folk Havercraft Guild.

According to the maid's story, which was communicated to Captain John M. Anderson, of the Back Bay police station, a man's voice said, "I am going to kill the grand duke."

His present visit is the grand duke's second to this city as a paid lecturer. He told newspapermen he enjoyed earning his own living.

TWO STATE BOARDS PLAN REBUILDING OF FERRY BRIDGE

State highway boards of Georgia and South Carolina will hold a joint meeting at Augusta Friday to discuss rebuilding of the Sand Bar Ferry bridge over the Savannah river near Augusta.

Members of the boards of commissioners of Richmond county, Ga., and Aiken county, S. C., also are expected to attend the meeting.

The Sand Bar Ferry bridge was badly damaged by the flood of two weeks ago. Several hundred feet of concrete and timber trestle were swept away. Construction of the bridge five years ago cost Georgia and South Carolina jointly $250,000.

It is planned to replace the bridge with a steel structure. It will take about six months to build it.

State Highway Engineer W. R. Neel and District Engineer George C. Blount, and engineers of the South Carolina highway department also will attend the meeting.

STATE TEACHERS' COLLEGE LIVING WITHIN INCOME

A report on the South Georgia Teachers' college, at Statesboro, released Monday by Tom Wisdom, state auditor, shows assets exceed liabilities by $6,076.54.

The school was formerly the Georgia Normal School of Statesboro. The name was changed at the last session of the legislature.

The balance sheet, as of June 30, showed $13,871.40 cash in bank and $17,500 due the school from the state. Liabilities were $12,465.57 in notes payable, $7,508.63 in accounts payable and $5,320.66 in unpaid salaries. Total assets were $31,371.40.

Total attendance of the school for the 1928-29 period was 270 regular students, 35 weekly average for the six-week summer school, and 251 for the training school.

Treasury in the school's income included $47,500 from the state, $36,914.65 from board and room, and $13,168.59 in fees. The total of the plant investment was $350,000.

Mr. Wisdom, commenting on the state, said the school, said it is "living well within its income."

JUDGE CONTINUES TRIAL OF NORMAN, FORMER BANKER

Trial of T. J. Norman, former official of the Colonial Trust Company, who is under indictment jointly with Sam Slicer, ex-president of the institution, on charges growing out of the collapse of the bank, was continued until next Monday when the case was called Monday in Judge Virginia B. Moore's division of the Fulton superior court. Postponement was granted because of illness in the family of Attorney Paul S. Etheridge, of defense counsel.

TENNESSEE POWER TO BUILD LINE TO MUSCLE SHOALS

Montgomery, Ala., October 14.—(P)—The Southern Tennessee Power Company of Chattanooga, Tenn., today advised the Alabama Public Service Commission that within the next six months the company expected to establish a transmission line with the government's Muscle Shoals plant to carry power into Tennessee. The company said, however, it was unable to report whether the power would be obtained from the government or from some intermediary company.

The notification was in reply to a request of the commission for more information on the company's proposal. It was written by J. C. Gould, Jr., president of the company.

The letter set forth that the company does not propose to distribute or sell power in Alabama and that the company has no contract with anyone other than a permit to construct a line over the government reservation and across the Tennessee river.

Old Hotel Register Reveals Names of Great Georgians

80-YEAR-OLD BOOKS FOUND AT WARM SPRINGS

BY M. L. WEINBERG.
Reminiscences of the good old days of mint juleps, hoop skirts, gray silk toppers, beloved mate and white-whiskered southern belles, stage coaches, beautiful southern belles and straight whiskies were brought to mind recently by the finding of several old registers in a dilapidated building that was being torn down at the famous Georgia Warm Springs health resort, of which Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, is the founder.

The building where the records were found was being razed to make way for a modern three-story infirmary which is a part of the building program going forward at the springs.

The records date back to the year 1849 and are of historical and human interest. They contain the signatures of many famous Georgia families and of great southern leaders, of which the following are a few:

Colonel Jackson and family, of Stone Mountain; Louis Kossuth, great Hungarian orator, who came over on the Mississippi man of war during the civil strife between the states; Thomas Jackson, W. L. Yancey, Charles Claghorn and Colonel Smith, registered as the owners of Stone Mountain at that time; James A. Calhoun, James Lovelace, listed as the proprietor of the Great Central Mail Line; Colonel Henry Miles, General James Hamilton, Hon. C. Y. Hill, of Monticello; Henry Clay, and numerous others.

The springs were run in 1880 by the Messrs. D. J. Chapman and J. L. Mustian. At that time travel was by stage coach and lines from Geneva, LaGrange and Columbus were operated by T. C. Miller, and Chapman and Spain.

At present one of these old coaches is at the springs and an object of much interest to visitors.

Many humorous comments run rampant through these old registers, of which the following are a few:

"Stag dance tonight and what is most astonishing all behaved well."

A signature of Gen. MacDonald is followed by the cryptic remark: "No one but a drunk or a fool will forge names."

Then follows: "Host rather sentimental today to his guests; hope he will be himself soon."

Of Henry Clay this unknown clerk says: "A fallen star thou brilliant in the dust."

Many reminders of these old days at Warm Springs are still standing, the old Concord coach, an iron man which was used to improve duelling eyes, and the old inn built many years ago.

The spirit of the old Warm Springs and the old south is still carefully nurtured and preserved. The place wins the heart of everyone who visits there, whether for treatment, recreation, with its natural loveliness, its invigorating waters, and its deep purpose.

NO LEGS BEAUTIFUL ENOUGH FOR PUBLIC, PROFESSOR CLAIMS

Gary, Ind., October 14.—(United News).—No leg is beautiful enough to be bared to public gaze, the Indiana state W. C. T. U. convention was told here today by Professor Raymond Schütz, sociologist of North Manchester university.

He urged the W. C. T. U. to campaign against bare legs and jazz dancing just as strenuously as it fought liquor.

"It is not because the leg is nude, but because it is crude to expose it that it should always be kept covered in public," the professor said.

SHAKEUP REPORTS IN STATE HIGHWAY FORCES DENIED

That a shakeup was impending in the highway engineering department was denied by Colonel Sam Tate, chairman of the board, Monday.

Colonel Tate said that he was certain no change was now contemplated, and that there would be none before January 1, when W. J. Vereen, of Monticello, will take the place of Stanley S. Bennett, of Quitman, as a member of the board.

"I have nothing to say other than that I am sure no change will be made before Mr. Vereen becomes a member of the board," Colonel Tate stated.

Current rumors were that a general reorganization would take place which would affect W. R. McNeel, highway engineer, and other high department officials.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY MOVES TICKET OFFICE

Barry, district passenger agent. Associated with him are: G. F. Gratton, O. B. Price, and H. D. Pickering, traveling passenger agents; J. T. Clendenin, city passenger agent; and Devries Davis, city ticket agent.

6 MONTHS' TERM GIVEN BY JUDGE TO PANHANDLER

Suspicion aroused in a benefactor by the actions of Henry Mize caused the detention of the alleged panhandler, according to testimony Monday before Judge Jesse M. Wood in criminal court of Atlanta. A business man testified that Mize "hummed" him for a dime so as to catch a street car and ride to Inman Yards, where he "intended" catching a train. A few minutes after he gave Mize a quarter, he saw the defendant approach another man and make a similar touch, the business man said. An investigation revealed that Mize had a regular route which he worked every day. Judge Wood was told. The defendant was given six months on a charge of vagrancy.

OFFICIALS SILENT ON PACIFIC CONTEST FOR DIRIGIBLE BASE

Washington, October 14.—(P)—The report of the naval aeronautic board, appointed to select a site of a Pacific coast dirigible base, is expected to reach the secretary of the navy some time this week.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, who is chairman of the board, said today that all research work in connection with the location had been completed and that only drafting of the report remained to be done.

The contents of the report, which is to be closely guarded until its submission to congress early in the winter, holds more than usual interest because of the close competition among all Pacific coast communities for the distinction of acquiring the home of the two great aerial warships now under construction at the Akron, Ohio, plant of the Goodyear-Zeppelin company.

LAKEWOOD AVENUE REPAIRING STARTED BY COUNTY FORCES

Central of Georgia Discusses Economic Importance of Railroad Purchases

The Central of Georgia is purchasing for delivery in 1930, five hundred and fifty freight cars at a cost of one million dollars. Following a policy of patronizing, whenever possible, industries in its immediate territory, the railroad placed this order with the Birmingham plant of the Pullman Car and Manufacturing Corporation.

This new equipment will enable the railroad to improve its service, and the million dollars involved will go into circulation in the channels of trade as payment for workmen's wages, for steel, lumber, etc. The wages in turn will be passed on for the necessities and luxuries of life.

Railroad expenditures are a factor in maintaining prosperous conditions. Capital improvements of the railroads during the past six years have totaled more than five billion dollars.

A railroad benefits from the prosperity of the section it serves, but through its expenditures it makes an important contribution to that prosperity. The railroads, either directly or through their millions of employees, are one of the largest users of the products of farms and factories. It is important, both from an efficiency and an economy standpoint, that their earnings be sufficient to keep their purchases above the bare necessities. Under such conditions they will continue able to discharge their dual obligation to transport and to consume the products of their fellow citizens.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

A. E. CLIFT,
President, Central of Georgia Railway Company.

In Spite of Much Criticism, Britain's Expensive Dirigible Makes Successful Trial Run

Attains Little Velocity
On 300-Mile Jaunt But Speed Will Be Tested
Later.

Cardington, England, October 14.—(AP)—Taking advantage of perfect flying weather, the much-criticized British dirigible R-101 slipped away from her mooring post today and made a 300-mile trial flight over southeastern England.

Cruising over London she gave the city a chance to see the largest airship in the world, which cost England $5,000,000.

Major Q. H. Scott, British aeronautic expert who commanded the R-101, said the flight had been very satisfactory.

"The whole handling of this big ship proved much easier than we hoped. The noise of the engines was very slight in the passenger cars. It was very comfortable indeed.

"We went easy at first and worked up to something over 50 miles an hour. We will have the speed trials later."

The airship made an average speed of 55 miles an hour, covering the 300 miles in five hours and 34 minutes. Experts had disputed about the speed of which she is capable, most of them maintaining that the best she can do is much less than the 85 miles an hour which she was designed to do.

One novel feature of the cruise was a parachute drill, corresponding roughly to lifeboat drill aboard an ocean liner. This was held at an altitude of 2,000 feet.

The drill, which was for the purpose of acquainting passengers and crew with their aerial life stations, followed the procedure of lifeboat drill. Parachutes were distributed in various parts of the airship. This produced the unpleasant fact that for 52 persons aboard there were only 50 parachutes.

SEVEN MEMBERS OF PARKING BODY NAMED BY MAYOR

Seven of the eight members of a special committee to recommend parking regulations in the downtown business district to be offered to city council were named Monday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale in accordance with a councilmanic resolution.

Those selected are Councilman James L. Wells, of the eighth ward and chairman of the traffic committee of city council, chairman; C. C. Whitaker, chairman of a special traffic commission appointed by the mayor to take a survey of conditions in Atlanta with a view of solving the problem; John E. Smith, P. Allen and Alfred L. Myers, representatives of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association; Councilman Philip Breitenbuecher, of the first ward, also from city council; and Frank Butler, of the Georgia Power company.

One other representative from the power company is to be named.

Members of the committee are to review the report of the parking committee of the traffic commission and to make recommendation to council as to legislation to be effective in the central business district.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED TO WALKER P. INMAN

Wife Is To Get $750 Monthly for Rest of Life.

Reno, Nev., October 14.—(Special.)—Another decree of divorce was entered here late today for Walker P. Inman, son of Mrs. James B. Duke, widow of the late tobacco millionaire, daughter of a Kokomo, Ind., clergyman. The new decree provides an income for life for Mrs. Inman, while in the one granted last April she received $12,500 a month until November, 1932, conforming to a separation agreement made by the couple in November, 1927.

After several weeks' negotiations between counsel for Inman and for Mrs. Inman the agreement was completed and signed today. Mrs. Inman has been here for about 10 days, while Inman arrived last night.

The agreement provides that Mrs. Inman shall receive $5,000 in cash to care for some of her expenses incident to the trial of her divorce case here last April; that she shall receive $1,250 a month until December 1, 1932, at which time the agreement of November 28, 1927, expires, and from that time she shall receive $750 a month for life, whether she remarries or not. It also provides that attorneys for Mrs. Inman are to be paid $25,000 for their services by Inman.

Inman went into court late today and asked for a new trial of the divorce case, which had been appealed. The request was granted immediately and he was then given a decree on the merits of the case. This was a part of the original sensational case last spring in which he charges Mrs. Inman with infidelity. The request of the last divorce case was submitted as the record of this case. No new testimony was offered and the only change made was the inclusion of the settlement agreement.

Inman got the divorce last April on grounds of extreme cruelty. The new agreement provides that Mrs. Inman shall receive $5,000 in cash to care for some of her expenses incident to the trial of her divorce case here last April; that she shall receive $1,250 a month until December 1, 1932, at which time the agreement of November 28, 1927, expires, and from that time she shall receive $750 a month for life, whether she remarries or not. It also provides that attorneys for Mrs. Inman are to be paid $25,000 for their services by Inman.

PLANNING BOARD GIVES APPROVAL TO ZONE CHANGES

The city planning commission Monday approved two petitions for changes in zoning laws and advised two others. The recommendations will be filed with city council when that body meets next Monday.

Construction of an apartment house on the northeast corner of Piedmont avenue and Westminster drive, and erection of a business house at the northeast corner of Washington street and Woodward avenue were the petitions before the commission. Both places formerly were in the dwelling house zone.

Petitioners withdrew for the present a petition asking rezoning of St. Paul and Fair streets from dwelling house property to business.

BANK CLEARINGS AT HIGHEST MARK SINCE BOOM PERIOD

Atlanta bank clearings for Monday reached the highest mark since the post-war boom, according to the figures reported by the Atlanta Clearing House Association. Monday's clearings amounted to $15,248,864.74 as compared with $11,817,867.12 for the corresponding day last year—a gain of $6,430,997.62.

The large clearings for the day were partly explained by the holiday Saturday. Another reason is the reflection of natural expansion in general business accompanying the fall season of trade.

UNABLE TO FEEL PAIN IN LIMBS, BURNS TO DEATH

New York, October 14.—(AP)—Surrounded by evidences of an all-night drinking party, the charred body of Charles Randolph, 26, of Greenwich, Conn., was found today in a bedroom of the Hotel Belmont.

Dr. F. Osserman, Randolph's physician, said his patient had been insensible to pain in his arms and legs, and police said he had apparently tried to extinguish his blazing pajamas and returned to bed unaware they still were afire. Police said the physician had told them that Randolph had been evicted from several hotels recently for drinking.

Police learned that Randolph had dismissed a nurse who was sent to care for him over the week-end. Authorities also said that a Margaret St. John had told them she had visited Randolph, remaining with him several hours. When she left he was asleep, she said.

Authorities said Randolph was wealthy and related to an old Virginia family.

Councilmen Asked To Attend Meeting On Wiring Problem

Members of city council were invited Monday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale to attend the meeting of the special city hall committee at 10 o'clock this morning to discuss the electrical wiring problem in Atlanta's new $1,000,000 city hall.

Council has approved action of G. Lloyd Preacher, architect, in ordering installations already made to be torn out but the mayor is still holding up action on that paper pending outcome of the meeting this morning, at which time manufacturers who furnished the wiring which has been installed will make a cash rebate offer to the city to prevent removal of the product, it was said.

The company already had offered the city $1,000 but it was turned down by the city hall committee. It is understood that another and a better offer will be presented to the committee today.

In inviting council members to be present at the hearing today, the mayor stated, he wants all members of council to be familiar with the proposition and be able to vote intelligently on it when it is presented to city council at its regular session next Monday.

Failure of manufacturers to furnish a product which stands the tests set out in specifications has caused the tangle, and members of the committee pointed out Monday that contractors are in no way responsible.

Solicitors for Chest All Volunteer Workers BY H. M. ATKINSON, President Atlanta Community Chest.

The Atlanta Community Chest has no paid solicitors. The only men and women connected with the Community Chest who are receiving any remuneration for their services are the office staff necessary for the proper distribution of the funds contributed. All of these doubtless are people who could earn more financially by accepting other positions. Their salaries are small; their work is difficult. We have reduced "overhead" to as low as 8 per cent. They are in the work because they believe in it.

No part of the sums collected go to these workers except the bare amounts necessary for seeing that the contributions are properly distributed for social service work. How much better it is to have people like these to see that your contributions are actually used for social service work than to have your funds turned over indiscriminately to whoever may apply.

'TOO LITTLE HUMANITY' CHARGED TO HOSPITALS

Chicago, October 14.—(AP)—Dr. W. J. Mayo, surgeon and chief of staff of the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., adversely criticized hospitals today in addressing the 12th annual hospital standardization conference, which precedes the clinical congress of American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Mayo charged the hospitals with too much salesmanship and too little humanity.

Supersalesmanship in management of some hospitals often resulted, he said, in the patient being placed in surroundings which, however they might appeal to his esthetic sense, were above his means.

"My own experience has been that patients in well-planned even moderate degree of privacy, on the whole will make a quicker recovery than in a private room with two attentive nurses who, unobtrusively, in caring for the physical needs and increasing the happiness of the patient, may suggest a mental state in which the diseased condition is exaggerated sympathetically," he said.

Dr. Mayo defended the trained nurse, declaring that at present her fine training was wasted in scrubbing floors, making beds, giving patients baths and other tasks a hospital maid could be trained to do in six months.

TWO MEN ARE HELD TO FEDERAL COURT ON LIQUOR CHARGE

J. L. McFarlane and T. W. Johnson were bound over to the federal grand jury Monday on charges of possessing whisky at a preliminary hearing before the U. S. commissioner's court Monday. McFarlane was held under $1,000 bond, and Johnson's bond was fixed at $500.

A small quantity of liquid, wrung from a bathroom mat of an apartment shared by McFarlane and Johnson, was used as evidence against the pair. Johnson and McFarlane were arrested in their apartment Saturday afternoon. Officers testified that they were forced to batter down the front door to gain entrance.

SPEAKERS TELL NEEDS OF COMMUNITY CHEST

Appeal Made in Radio Talks and by Appearances Before Atlanta Gatherings.

The message of human needs and their service, the appeal for every man and woman in Atlanta to help fulfill the obligation of welfare work that rests upon every community, is being delivered to Atlanta this week by speakers enlisted by the Atlanta Community Chest.

Their talks, by radio and by personal appearance before every gathering of Atlanta men and women this week and next, are directed to the appeal for Atlanta to respond to the needs of the Chest and its 30 societies of helpfulness and social service.

Speakers in the daily radio appeal this week will be Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church; Eugene Gunby, S. C. Dobbs, Jr., and Horace Russell, president of the Family Welfare Society and chairman of the speakers' bureau. Last week the radio speakers, each in a ten-minute appeal, were P. M. Colbert, Dr. W. A. Sutton, Arthur Raper, and Eugene Gunby.

Headquarters of the speakers' bureau have been established at 424 Wesley Memorial building, in charge of Mrs. D. R. Paige, of the Child's United Social Service, and Miss Mary Dickinson, executive of the Tuberculosis Association, two organizations supported through the Chest, who are lieutenants in this work of Chairman Horace Russell. They have announced that a call to this office, Ivy 0997, will bring the assignment of a capable speaker for any occasion.

Speakers have been provided for meetings of all civic clubs, including the Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitan, Lions, City Club, Atlanta Masonic Club, American Business Club; for meetings of women's organizations, and for Bible classes of all churches.

Manufacturers Welcome Probe of Lobby Activity, Association President Says

Inquiry Welcomed as "Wholesome Thing," Members of National Body Informed.

New York, October 14.—(AP)—John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, today said he welcomed "as a wholesome thing" the proposal for an investigation of lobbying at Washington.

His remark was contained in an address at the Hotel Roosevelt before the opening session of the 34th annual meeting of the association. At the same session the association was told in reports that the closed shop had attached an extra cost of $3,551,000.

CHANGE BROUGHT BY NEW SARGON IS 'WONDERFUL'

"I Couldn't Ask More of Any Medicine Than Sargon Did for Me," Says Veteran Department Store Salesman.

Medical authorities have found that seven people out of ten, past the age of thirty, suffer from the effects of a sluggish liver and insufficient bile flow, which almost invariably brings on constipation. The new Sargon, when used in conjunction with Sargon Soft Mass Pills, contains the most powerful stimulant to the liver known to medical science. Thousands of people have testified that Sargon not only gave them lasting relief from constipation, but brought them new health, strength and vitality. Read what this remarkable treatment did for Edgar L. White, who for nineteen years has been connected with Bass' Department Store, of Atlanta, as salesman. He recently said:

"Constipation set in about a year ago and this was the real beginning of my bad health. Instead of helping me, the laxatives I took kept me upset. It seemed like everything I ate disagreed with me, my stomach was in an acid condition, and I suffered terribly from heartburn. I'd have one headache after another, and severe pains would often strike me in the back of my neck. I lost weight steadily, and I was so weak and run-down that when I attempted to climb a stairway or exerted myself even moderately, my breath would come in short gasps. I took so many different medicines I hardly knew which way to turn when one day I decided to try the new Sargon treatment everywhere was recommending so highly.

"This proved one of the best moves I have ever made, for in just a short time I felt a wonderful change for the better. Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills seemed to entirely rid my system of all poisons, and my head aches and every other ache and pain gave me. Sargon Pills went straight to my liver and toned it up to a healthy, active condition, and gave me lasting relief from constipation and I never have to take laxatives now. My appetite has increased, and nothing I eat gives me the slightest stomach trouble or indigestion. I have gained eight pounds, my strength and energy have come back, and I am not worried any more with shortness of breath. Sargon topped up my entire system, and I can now do as much work as the best of them. No man could ask more of any medicine than what Sargon did for me. It has certainly proved its true worth in my case."

The Sargon Man is at Jacobs' main store, 14 Marietta street, where he is meeting the public and giving the facts about this remarkable new scientific discovery. He cites case after case of Sargon's wonderful powers at work; personal instances of health renewed and happiness restored, right here in this city. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' drugstores throughout Atlanta.—(adv.)

UNION LABOR POLICY ARGUED AT MEETING

Conscription Debated as American Legion Head Extends Greeting.

Toronto, Ont., October 14.—(AP)—Between intervals of sharp-edged debate, the American Federation of Labor convention made considerable progress today toward recording union labor policies and programs for the coming year.

Major C. L. Bodenheimer, newly elected commander of the American Legion, brought delegates the greetings regularly exchanged between veterans and the trades union central body and drew an official response from William Green, president and general secretary of the A. F. of L. Green's position in favor of conscription of capital and man power in time of war.

Although always willing to unite with the legion, Green said, the federation could not consider it consistent in a nation working for peace to advance conscription in time of peace, and doubted also the constitutionality of the capital conscription suggested.

Setting to its official work, the convention quickly and without question assented to an expression of opinion favoring enactment of federal legislation to meet the coal industry's difficulties; and after some discussion also accepted a proposal for voluntary national registration of aliens residing in the United States.

It reaffirmed opposition to the "equal rights" constitutional amendment put forward by some feminine organizations, on the ground that it meant abrogation of legislation limiting hours and conditions of work for women in industry.

It approved without debate a resolution urging state legislation to confine use of convict labor to articles of state and local government consumption, and it likewise voted without a single negative a series of resolutions relating to civil service employees of the federal government.

These included support for wage raising acts and for bills proposing increased pension and half-day work throughout the year on Saturday. One referred the question of how best to support preference for war veterans to the federation's executive board.

Another, of more general nature, appealed to the postoffice department to alter its accounting system, so that $150,000,000 per year, alleged to be the value of franking and other public welfare service should not be allowed to swell the national postal deficit.

Congress was urged to abolish the sea service bureau of the shipping board.

Fire Prevention Week Sees Big Blaze at Rome

Rome, Ga., October 14.—(Special.)—The origin of a $100,000 blaze which partially destroyed the J. W. Stapp Motor Car Company here at midnight Sunday was listed as unknown by the chief of the fire department today. Nineteen used cars were destroyed and five new cars were damaged badly.

The loss was covered by insurance, as was damage to some property of the J. L. Adams Motor Car Company, which was in the building following a change in location several days earlier. The fire is listed as one of the heaviest of the year and it came at the close of Fire Prevention Week. During the week seven other fires were reported.

Memorial Board Directors Hold Meeting Monday

A special meeting of the board of directors and the members of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association will be held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, October 21, in the assembly room of the Chamber of Commerce building. It was announced Saturday by Rogers Winter, secretary of the association.

The report of a special committee appointed under a resolution passed by the board at a meeting October 10 approving the plan of Wiley L. ## Game Operators At Fair Midway Draw $50 Fines Pleas of guilty to the misdemeanor charge of operating a gambling device brought fines of $50 each for C. A. Dunn, M. Goldberg, E. Erskine and Sam Schwartz Monday in Judge Virlyn B. Moore's division of Fulton superior court.

The defendants were arrested at the Southeastern Fair during a raid on alleged gambling devices. The raid was led by George Pounds and Joe Pelot, of the solicitor-general's staff of investigators, who were assisted by County Patrolmen Atkinson, Dixon, Vinson, Wilson and Carroll. The four convention spokesmen in the case were "Bingo" game, played with numbers and seals of corn, it was said.

A quantity of alleged gambling paraphernalia seized during the raid on the fair was destroyed Monday in the court house furnaces. The equipment included "Bingo" cards and boards, "Roll Down" boards, and false bottomed tube equipped with hidden springs by which it is possible to cause thrown balls to rebound to the "sucker's" loss. Other defendants arrested in the raid were fined in superior court last week.

CHEMIST THINKS GIRL ATTACKED BY PANTAGES

State Nears End of Case Against Millionaire Theater Magnate.

Los Angeles, October 14.—(AP)—The state today slowly approached the close of its case against Alexander Pantages, 54-year-old vaudeville impresario, being tried on a statutory charge. Police Chemist Rex Welch, who District Attorney Fitts said would be the last prosecution witness, was subjected to a lengthy cross-examination by defense attorneys.

Welch identified clothing worn by Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer and Pantages' accuser, on August 9, the day of the alleged attack, as garments he received for chemical examination. The chemist testified he was convinced the attack on the dancer had been made as charged.

Policewoman Hannah Beatty, who examined Miss Pringle the night of the alleged attack, and who was expected to testify, would not be called, Fitts said, as her place had been taken by Policewoman Kathryn Bellus, of the juvenile bureau, who also made an examination. Mrs. Bellus described the torn condition of the girl's clothing and said Miss Pringle was hysterical and disheveled. She also described bruises she said she found on the girl's body. Two police officers, L. F. Sitts and E. N. Lucks, testified they assisted in the arrest of Pantages and Sitts said he returned to the scene of the alleged attack and picked up parts of broken beads. He identified bits of red glass beads previously admitted as a state exhibit as those he had found in the cubby hole room in Pantages' theater building, where the attack is alleged to have occurred.

Usher Testifies. The defense attacked the testimony of Miss Tillie Russo, one of four state witnesses, to the effect that the millionaire theater man attempted to influence their testimony.

Miss Russo, an usher in Pantages' theater at the time of his alleged attack on Miss Pringle, told from the witness stand Friday of receiving an order from Pantages to testify that she saw Miss Pringle enter the theater alone. Miss Pringle claimed Pantages took her into the theater, left her there while he went to a barber shop and then returned and escorted her to a private office, where she alleged he assaulted her.

"Pantages stepped to the theater door and motioned Miss Pringle to take a seat, did he not?" Defense Attorney Joseph Ford asked. "Yes," Miss Russo answered. "Then, as a matter of fact, when he told you to say she went in alone that was true, wasn't it?" District Attorney Buren Fitts offered an objection on the grounds of improper and argumentative questioning, which was sustained.

offer an individual trust participation in a group investment administered by a fiduciary organization.

Increasing need is felt for expert help in investment. This is not surprising in this day of expansion, mergers, shifting economic currents. Upon the small investor the problem presses with special force. How for example can he diversify $5000 or even $50,000? How can he safely follow the example of the large investor and buy common stocks? Furthermore, how can he afford the constant attention required to keep in touch with changing conditions, fluctuations, reorganizations, new issues—to exercise or sell rights when offered—to rearrange the list from time to time?

To do all this and do it well is practically impossible for the busy man of affairs. It is to solve this problem and to render a type of trust service hitherto available only for very large estates that our Uniform Trusts were devised.

We accept responsibility for your own particular fund, under a revocable trust. You authorize us to mingle your fund with other similar funds. The large capital thus assembled is spread over a wide range not only of bonds and preferred stocks, but also of selected common stocks. These investments are made and constantly examined by a committee of principal officers of the trust company, and are reviewed frequently by a committee of the directors. Thus are maintained the high standards which have always marked our trust service. The aim is protective, not speculative. Any increase in the aggregate income and value of the total fund is shared proportionately by each person whose funds are mingled.

$100,000,000 To Be Spent By France in Five Years To Strengthen Frontiers

Spending Almost as Much Money in Alps as Along Rhine, Report Shows.

Paris, October 14.—(P)—France will spend 2,500,000,000 francs—about $100,000,000—during the next five years on "defensive fortifications of her post-war frontiers, north, east and in the Alps."

This was brought out during the course of a recent meeting of the budget finance committee of the chamber. At that meeting, incidentally, Paul Painlevé, minister of war, was scored by nationalist members as a pacifist because the work of fortification along the frontiers, they claimed, was lagging.

It also developed that for the first time in its history France is devoting

MODEL HUSBAND HELD FOR MURDER OF GIRL

Chicagoan Admits Assault and Murder When Advances Repulsed.

Chicago, October 14.—(P)—John E. Preston, an interior decorator, whose wife believed him a "model husband," was held to the DuPage county grand jury today without bail on a charge of murder.

He confessed, authorities said, to assaulting and slaying Miss Agnes Johnston, 26, with whom he had a clandestine meeting Saturday night. Preston, at first denying he had killed the young woman, finally admitted strangling her to death. He waived a preliminary examination before a justice of the peace. The grand jury now is in session and probably will consider his case this week.

Preston confessed to Sheriff Lawrence Hattendorf that with Miss Johnston and her companion, Miss Mathilda Murphy, he drove to a roadhouse near West Chicago, using a rented car. He had told his wife he would have to work late. During the evening Preston drank considerable liquor.

The girls asked to be taken home. Miss Murphy said he became offensive and they jumped from the car. He gave chase, catching Miss Johnston. In his confession Preston told of assaulting her and finally killing her as she resisted his advances. He hid her body under some weeds and brush, abandoned the rented car and started for home. His disheveled and unsteady condition aroused suspicion and a street car conductor notified police who arrested him even before the crime had been discovered.

It was not until Miss Murphy, alarmed by the absence of her friend, called the police and told them of the affair that the slaying became known. They found the body and Preston broke down after at first maintaining that robbers had taken the girl from him.

WIFE BURNED, HUSBAND HELD BY AUTHORITIES

Philadelphia, October 14.—(P)—Mrs. Anna Haas, 58, was burned to death under mysterious circumstances early today, and her husband, Jacob, is under arrest as a material witness.

Police in answer to an anonymous telephone message went to the couple's house in West Philadelphia. They found Mrs. Haas unconscious on the kitchen floor with severe burns over her face and entire body. Her dress had been burned off, and she was covered with a man's light overcoat.

She died shortly after being admitted to the hospital. In the parlor of the home, the husband, Jacob, was found sitting in a stupor. He had apparently been drinking, police said, and was unable to answer questions coherently.

"I came in at 7 o'clock and put a coat over her," was the only statement he would make.

The resolution was passed on motion of Governor L. G. Hardman.

It was asked that the tariffs on these products be made "sufficiently high to give the American farmer reasonable protection." It suggested that seven cents a pound was the minimum to be applied to jute and burlap.

Paper Money Has Value! AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

An ancient prejudice nursed the ignorant fear and distrust of paper money. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE inspires the faith which completely accepts the printed obligation. In the interest of convenience and safety, its use is universal.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

Ford Works Unceasingly To Gather Edison Relics

BY A. M. SMITH.
(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)
Detroit, Mich., October 14.—How Henry Ford gathered original parts, parcels, bricks, board, bits of furniture, broken glass and crockery, laboratory apparatus, chemicals and machines now obsolete but precious to the man who proposes to make Menlo Park of Dearborn, Mich., a lasting monument to Thomas A. Edison, is a story of the untiring persistence of one man linked with the co-operation of many individuals and corporations who wished to contribute to the project.

Carloads of parts of buildings, gathered from many sources but originally integral parts of the Edison buildings in Menlo Park, N. J., and Fort Myers, Fla., were laboriously sought out, identified, purchased when not donated, moved by Mr. Ford to Dearborn and reconstructed in precisely the form in which Mr. Edison owned and used them.
If the wish of Mr. Ford prevails—and only Father Time can defeat his wish—the buildings to be rededicated in the Edison celebration October 21 will remain forever, a memorial to the man whom all the world delights to honor on that day, and a permanent lesson to future generations of the value of practical inventive work and untiring industry.

Fresh Impetus.

Fresh impetus was given to cooperation with Mr. Ford in this enterprise when, on February 11, the Edison Memorial Park, New York organization, met at the Hotel Astor and appointed a committee to confer with similar committees representing the Association of Edison Illuminating Companies throughout the world on the problem of a permanent home for Edison.

This material would consist of original models, tools and equipment used by Mr. Edison during the period of the invention of the incandescent lamp, and electrical apparatus of historical value.

These committees, knowing the plan of reconstructing the Edison buildings at Dearborn undertaken by Mr. Ford, decided to turn over all such material to him.

Plans for his memorial undertaking had been discussed by Mr. Ford with Mr. Edison, with the result that the original idea of an institute to perpetuate the work and ideals of Mr.
Edison to be located in New York City, was abandoned, and it was agreed that Mr. Ford might remove what remained of Mr. Edison's original plant at Menlo Park to Dearborn, Mich., and there assemble a group of buildings as nearly as possible with their original materials and in their original setting duplicated in the village plot of Mr. Ford's Dearborn museum grounds.

The years since Mr. Edison occupied these buildings had wrought havoc with them. Mr. Ford located and purchased three homes which had been constructed from material taken from the Edison buildings at Menlo Park.
Bricks, lumber, material, machinery from the dismantled buildings were retrieved.

Rejuvenated Boiler.

About the old machine shop were piles of bricks, broken from its walls and foundations, only sections of the original walls standing intact. The original engine which operated the shop had long since been junked, but the boiler remained, having been transferred to Orange, N. J., when Mr.
Edison moved his plant to that place.
This boiler was obtained and today stands rejuvenated, ready to furnish steam to operate dynamos, lathes and other machinery of the reconstructed shop in Dearborn.

One or two of the early dynamos used by Mr. Edison remained; the others had been scattered and lost.
The entire original set of dynamos has been duplicated by the General Electric company, as ordered by Mr. Ford on specifications drawn up by Charles L. Clarke, Mr. Edison's chief engineer in the early days of the Edison Light Company of Menlo Park.

Restoration of the machine shop has been made by Mr. Ford by use of such of the original machinery as could be located and brought to Dearborn, and of machines of the same pattern, year and make as those originally used.

Engine foundations of the Menlo Park plant were intact, and have been removed to their renewed use in the reconstructed plant at Dearborn. Raffers of the old building had been put into the roof of a sawmill near Menlo Park. These were obtained by Mr.
Ford and are now in their original place in the Dearborn restoration.

The meticulous care exercised by Mr. Ford in restoring everything as it was in the original plant is indicated in the reconstruction of the stairway of the laboratory. The memory of men who worked in the laboratory years ago seemed to Mr. Ford he at fault in placing the main post of the stairway.

"The dimensions of that stairway did not seem to me to be just right," he said. "I went into that and found that we had the post 18 inches out of position. So we rebuilt the stairway."

Every bit of material used by Mr.
Edison is saved, if Mr. Ford can recover it. "I don't want one scrap of material with which Mr. Edison worked to be lost if we can reclaim it," he explained.

Washington, October 14.—(AP)—Reopening of the case of Arthur Ser-vener, a city police detective found dead two years ago in an alley back of his that the Washington police "know Servener was murdered and they

Blease initiated the present senate

When Nature Warns of too Much Acid

MILK OF MAGNESIA brings quickest Relief

AUTHORITIES have warned us so often that nowadays almost all people know the dangers of a diet too rich in acid-producing foods. Dietary experts say the ideal menu would consist of about three-fourths fruits and vegetables—the alkaline producers—to one-fourth of those which produce acids; the meats, sweets, cereals.
But knowing this, how many can avoid an occasional touch of over-acidity?

Of course, when pain and sourness about two hours after eating, heartburn, headaches, gas or nausea, warn of too much acid, we can diet our way out of the trouble.
But that takes time. And there's no use suffering when Nature has provided such a quick, harmless means of relief. Milk of Magnesia. Doctors the world over are united in favor of just one form of magnesia. For over fifty years, they have prescribed Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It is an almost tasteless, milk-white liquid; magnesia in perfect suspension.

It is in the form pronounced most effective by the U. S. Dispensatory.
Just a spoonful in a glass of water and every trace of over-acidity soon disappears. In five minutes you are smiling, happy again. Its action is thorough, yet nothing could be more soothing to an ailing stomach.

This perfect anti-acid has also gentle laxative properties. It cleanses and sweetens the entire digestive tract without any of the disturbance common to strong cathartics. It has many important uses in any household.
Complete directions, worth your reading, come with every package.

All drug stores have the 25c and 50c bottles. The genuine, prescription product, with 50 years' experience behind it, is always marked with the name Phillips. So look for it in buying.

Milk of Magnesia is always a liquid.
Phillips is the genuine.

Ford Works Unceasingly To Gather Edison Relics

BY A. M. SMITH.
(Written Exclusively for The Constitution

Detroit, Mich., October 14.—How Henry Ford gathered original parts, parcels, bricks, board, bits of furniture, broken glass and crockery, laboratory apparatus, chemicals and machines now obsolete but precious to the man who proposes to make Menlo Park of Dearborn, Mich., a lasting memorial to Thomas A. Edison, is a story of the untiring persistence of one man linked with the co-operation of many individuals and corporations who wished to contribute to the project. Carloads of parts of buildings, gathered from many sources but originally integral parts of the Edison buildings in Menlo Park, N. J., and Fort Myers, Fla., were laboriously sought out, identified, purchased when not donated, moved by Mr. Ford to Dearborn and reconstructed in precisely the form in which Mr. Edison owned and used them.

If the wish of Mr. Ford prevails—and only Father Time can defeat his wish—the buildings to be rededicated in the Edison celebration October 21, will be forever a memorial to the man whom all the world delights to honor on that day, and a permanent lesson to future generations of the value of practical, inventive work and untiring industry.

Fresh impetus was given to co-operation with Mr. Ford in this enterprise when, on February 11, the Edison Pioneer, a New York organization, met at the Hotel Astor and appointed a committee to confer with similar committees representing the Association of Edison Illuminating Companies throughout the world on the problem of a permanent home for Edison.

This material would consist of original models, tools and equipment used by Mr. Edison during the period of the invention of the incandescent lamp, and electrical apparatus of historical value.

These committees, knowing the plan of reconstructing the Edison buildings at Dearborn undertaken by Mr. Ford, decided to turn over all such material to him.

Plans for his memorial undertaking had been discussed by Mr. Ford with Mr. Edison, with the result that the original idea of an institute to perpetuate the work and ideals of Mr. Edison to be located in Menlo Park, N. J., was abandoned, and it was agreed that Mr. Ford might remove what remained of Mr. Edison's original plant at Menlo Park to Dearborn, restoring the entire group of buildings as nearly as possible with their original materials and in their original setting duplicated in the village plot of Mr. Ford's Dearborn museum grounds.

The years since Mr. Edison occupied these buildings had wrought havoc with them. Mr. Ford located and purchased three homes which had been constructed from material taken from the Edison buildings at Menlo Park. Bricks, lumber and other materials from the dismantled buildings were retrieved.

Rejuvenated Boiler.

About the old machine shop were piles of bricks, taken from its walls and foundations, only sections of the original walls standing intact. The original engine, which operated the shop had long since been junked, but the boiler remained, having been transferred to Orange, N. J., when Mr. Edison moved his plant to Menlo Park. This boiler was obtained, and today stands rejuvenated, ready to furnish steam to operate dynamos, lathes and other machinery of the reconstructed shop in Dearborn.

One or two of the early dynamos used by Mr. Edison remained; the others had been scattered and lost. The entire original set of dynamos has been duplicated by the General Electric company, as ordered by Mr. Ford on specifications drawn up by Charles L. Clarke, Mr. Edison's chief engineer in the early days of the Edison Light Company of Menlo Park.

Restoration of the machine shop has been made by Mr. Ford by use of such of the original machinery as could be located and brought to Dearborn, and of machines of the same pattern, year and make as those originally used.

Engine foundations of the Menlo Park plant were intact, and have been removed to their renewed use in the reconstructed plant at Dearborn. Rafter of the old building had been put into the roof of a sawmill near Menlo Park. These were obtained by Mr. Ford and are now in their original place in the Dearborn restoration.

The meticulous care exercised by Mr. Ford in restoring everything as it was in the original plant is indicated in the reconstruction of the stairway of the laboratory. The memory of men who worked in the laboratory years ago seemed to Mr. Ford to be at fault in placing the main post of the stairway.

"The dimensions of that stairway did not seem to me to be just right," he said. "I went into that and found that we had the post 18 inches out of position. So we rebuilt the stairway."

Every bit of material used by Mr. Edison is saved, if Mr. Ford can recover it. "I don't want one scrap of material with which Mr. Edison worked to be lost if we can reclaim it," he explained.

HUGGINS LEAVES FLORIDA PROPERTY TO HIS RELATIVES

St. Petersburg, Fla., October 14.—(AP)—A quarter million dollars of property of the late Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, will be distributed to his immediate heirs, following the reading of his will at the county court in Clearwater, Fla., this morning with his sister, Myrtle Marie, of this city, receiving $200,000, while two brothers, Arthur and Clarence, will each receive $10,000. The former is a resident of Middletown, N. Y.

Byron Clark, Jr., of Brooklyn, was named executor of the will, which was made August 2, 1927, in the presence of Walter S. Ross, St. Petersburg; Byron Clark and his son, Byron Clark, Jr., of Brooklyn. Two aunts, Matilda Reid, of this city, and Emma Reid, of Burns, Tenn., will each receive $500. The will was mailed to the executor of the estate this afternoon.

HE FLIN DEMANDS RE-OPENING OF CASE OF SLEUTH'S DEATH

Washington, October 14.—(AP)—Re-opening of the case of Arthur Scrivener, a city police detective found dead two years ago in an alley back of his home, was demanded in the senate today by Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, and prompted a remark by Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, that the Washington police "know Scrivener was murdered and they know the person who murdered him."

Bleuse initiated the present senate investigation of the police department after a grand jury had indicted Robert A. McPherson, Jr., for the murder of his youthful bride of eight months who was found in her apartment strangled by a pajama belt. This case previously had been held a suicide by a coroner's jury.

YOUTH, SLAYER OF DAD, GETS 5 TO 21 YEARS

Pine Bluff, Ark., October 14.—(AP)—Otis Hankins, 14, confessed slayer of his 60-year-old father, Wes Hankins, last May, was given an indeterminate sentence of from 5 to 21 years in the Arkansas Boys' Industrial school by Circuit Judge T. G. Parham in circuit court here today. Hankins entered a plea of guilty to second degree murder.

CHILD FALLS INTO CANAL AND RECOVERS

Bradenton, Fla., October 14.—(AP)—Edward Blanton, two years old, appeared to be in good trim again today following a period of seven hours unconsciousness induced by falling into a canal near the home of his parents yesterday.

The baby was rescued by his father, who found him floating on his back in the canal's three feet of water after the youngster had disappeared from the yard where he was playing.

A GREAT PUBLIC SERVICE.

There is general agreement in the opinion that the Southeastern Fair, which closed Saturday night, was the best in the history of that great institution, and this result is largely due to the broad vision, tireless energy and high capacity of the president, Alfred C. Newell.

This is said without losing sight of the fine service of Judge John S. Candler, who got together the best exhibit of cattle and swine in the history of the fair, or that of the general manager, Oscar Mills, or the effective work of other officers and directors. They all had an honorable part in this great achievement, but by common consent Mr. Newell was the masterful leader of this fine group of public servants.

At great personal sacrifice he gave himself wholeheartedly to the task of making a greater and better fair and in a few months he has broadened its scope and laid the foundation for a great industrial exposition that will give the country an adequate picture of the arts, industries and education of the southeastern states. This year's fair is the promise of greater things to come and if Mr. Newell remains at the head its future greatness is assured.

The long continued co-operation of Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, and his able lieutenants, has been a tower of strength to the fair and their exhibits have won great praise, as have those of the Georgia School of Technology and the public schools of Atlanta, Fulton and other counties.

The negro exhibit in extent and quality was so fine that it has attracted the attention and won the praise of all who examined it. The colored people have given convincing evidence of great progress.

The industrial exhibit did not come too soon. In the short time devoted to it that display gave convincing evidence of the great value of such an exhibit to manufacturers, merchants and consumers when the thousands of exhibitors in the southeast really exert themselves to show the public the extent, variety and excellence of their products. It ought not to be necessary for our merchants to go a thousand miles to buy goods that are made within sight of their doors. It is clearly to the advantage of manufacturers, merchants and consumers to build up home markets for home products.

WOMEN'S CIVIC APEAL.

This evening in the city auditorium the Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will present a community classic drama, "Athaliah," both in honor of their president, Mrs. Kate Green Hess, and to secure funds with which to carry on the civic activities of the clubs.

The appeal thus made to the Atlantans of culture and of enthusiasm for civic betterments should be answered fully and generously. The activities of the women's clubs are many and important, because they perform civic services to which the governments of city, county and state are incompetent because of legal restraints. They are dependent, however, upon the voluntary support of the benefited public, and hence these periodic offerings of cultural value received for the public support given.

The performance tonight will present an assemblage of the best dramatic and musical talent this community can supply, coached and directed to furnish a function of worth and brilliancy. The auditorium should be crowded with an audience in which the thousands of our citizens who love histrionic action and music will be collected. The women's clubs of this district are the most active and potential in the southeast and richly deserve the appreciation of our cultured and civic-minded citizens.

ANOTHER SOUTH-BAITER UP.

A new monthly magazine, aspiring to national recognition, issuing from Cleveland in Ohio, starts off on its left foot. It needs an editor with some scant regard for truth and impartiality. In support of that opinion we quote here the editor's reference to the textile mill troubles in North Carolina. He says:

"The workers obviously cannot be expected to continue on a scale of existence that is as low as that of negro plantation coolies in Africa. The employers cannot pay them higher wages when there is no money to pay them with, since most of the southern mills are themselves close to bankruptcy."

Certainly there can be no profit in seeking a quarrel with a creature who can write and publish such stuff as this in the face of the true state of affairs in North Carolina as reported by the Associated Press and by many of the most trustworthy correspondents of the national daily newspapers sent into the strike region to find the facts and tell them fairly.

We have seen no comment published anywhere, either in the regular labor press or in the more radical communist papers, so grossly false and distorted as the above extract from the sudden mystic room magazine. The workers in the mill villages and small cities of the south notoriously do not live on the "scale of existence" the editor represents and a mere glance at the quotations of southern cotton mill stocks compared with those of like eastern mills would have warned him against so flagrantly falsifying their financial state in general.

Such malicious propaganda is not helpful to either side of an unfortunate condition that needs the arbitration of just and humane spirits.

EXPAND THE BIG FAIR.

The success of the Southeastern Fair, which closed on Saturday night, was pronounced and also prophetic. Its popularity with exhibitors and the people alike should effectively encourage the officers and directors to go ahead with their tentative plans to expand the fair hereafter into a splendid annual interstate exposition for all the commonwealths of the south-east.

The centrality of Atlanta, the ease of access to the city by rail and hard roads, the growing interest in the region inside a circle with a 300-mile radius in agricultural pursuits, dairying, stock raising, manufactures and processing, argue that an annual industrial exposition for seven states would be a profitable and popular enterprise.

Such exhibitions are instructive to those who engage directly in the regional industries and they educate many thousands of persons every year to know the resources of their environment, to value home products, and to advertise to all corners the wealth and progressiveness of this section of Dixieland.

There is in this year's success of the fair a strong inducement to President Newell and his colleagues to go forward earnestly with their expansion plans.

Such is fame. The young man who stowed-away on the French overseas flight was seriously injured in an automobile accident two weeks ago and he is of so little importance that we have not learned from the dispatches whether he lived or died.

There is talk of another federal tax reduction. This will not interest the small fry whose only wish is that the government would remit some of the taxes paid by them back in the good old days.

All this piffle about the Scotch being parsimonious, pernicious, miserly, stingy, close, tight and so on must stop. We are indebted to them for golf and they have never tried to collect.

Just brought out that Gene Tunney attached $1,700,000 to himself from his fiscal encounters, but nothing was said about the royalties he received from popularizing Shakespeare.

If the thirteen-month year is agreed upon we trust they will put the extra month in between the time we leave off buying ice and begin using cold.

A dance marathon out west was broken up on account of the dance hall burning to the ground. That's the way we like to see records smashed!

"The tariff measure is taking shape," we are assured by news from Washington, but what else will take we can guess.

The watch on the Rhine will be self-winding by the first of the year.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

In Hebron.

Arab propaganda about Jewish atrocities in Palestine falls completely flat before the occurrences in Hebron and Safed. In these towns the Jews that were murdered certainly were not new-Jews, or political Jews as they call the Zionists, who have the vision of a Jewish state at the back of their heads. They were old inhabitants, descendants of residents since the days of the Crusades. For there were always Jews in Palestine. Then there were young yeshiva boys students of the Talmud-Torah school. All were ruthlessly slaughtered. I walked about the ruins in the house of Rabbi Slonim, where 30 Jews congregated on the night of the disturbances in the Hebron streets. The carnage and destruction were unbelievable. The ten-foot ceiling was splattered with blood. Such a thing is conceivable in a fortress or a dug-out when a shell explodes in it, but no explosives were used in Hebron by the murderers. Just knives. The most ghastly piece of evidence were the human entrails still lying about. The blood-soaked carpet in the floor like that of a slaughterhouse.

Attack.

On the road from Hebron to Bethlehem, the author in which I traveled was suddenly fired upon. The thing to do was to step on the gas and get away. None of us was armed. "It's the fun of being a correspondent not to be armed," said the official in Jerusalem to whom I applied for a permit to carry a revolver. Fortunately the Arabs were bad shots in our case and we got safely through. But I expected fully that some patrol would immediately rush out to the spot, when we reported the incident in Bethlehem and Jerusalem. Nothing of the sort. A corporal's guard could easily have dealt with the situation. In my indignation I volunteered to go out to the patrol. For, in spite of a most profound loathing for violence and bloodshed, I believe that one should not try to compromise with the forces of evil. I gave a ferocious tiger any leeway by letting him think you are afraid. Incidentally the spot of the attack was within a stone's throw of those Bethlehem fields where angels once sang the "Peace on Earth" hymn.

Palestinian Sunlight.

No sunlight on earth is as pure golden as that of the Holy Land. The sky seems to cry out in a voice of impeccable Chablis. Distances fade in the extraordinary visibility. The Dead Sea at Talmud looked a pleasant blue. The desert of Judea, 100 miles. Moab, the granite wall of blue, that holds the desert back in the east, appeared as near as a garden wall. The Jewish remains of Jerusalem, at a distance, spread out over its many hills, with the Citadel of David flying the Union Jack and the dome of the Omar mosque, a blue haze, giving the impression from a distance that frozen sunbeams have been embedded in it.

Health Talks

ROBBING ASTHMATICS OF THEIR PILLOWS.

It does seem like taking candy away from the baby when the doctor insists on depriving the asthmatic victim of his pillow, especially when the patient is able to lie down and sleep. Nevertheless this is precisely what must be done in certain cases of asthma if the patient is to get any relief at all. Not that the comfort of a pillow or any number of pillows desired is bad for asthma. It is the stuff pillows are made of that puts the wheeze in certain cases of asthma.

With the exception of a dwindling proportion of the population that still likes being humiliated, people subject to asthma generally know today that the condition is, like hives, caused by a peculiar individual sensitivity to certain substances that gets into the blood through some other means than normal digestion. To indicate this peculiar condition, which gives rise to spasmodic bronchial asthma in some cases, to hives in others, to sudden and mysterious digestive disturbances readily assumed to be ptomaine poisoning in other cases, to hypersensitive rhinitis in other cases, to giant hives (angioneurotic edema) in other cases, and sometimes perhaps to persistent or recurring outbreaks of eczema, there are several names unfamiliar to the laity but in common use among physicians. One name is anaphylaxis, the attack being called an anaphylactic reaction; another is the use of the word anaphylactic in the sense of the familiar word prophylactic; prophylactic is preventive or protective—the medical advisors of our dictionary makers are a bit off on this one; hadn't heard of anaphylaxis before they submitted definitions of prophylactic; or maybe they are just optimistic. Another term for anaphylaxis is allergy; another is hypersensitivity; another is atopy. The condition is of great importance because it is a fundamental part of immunity.

There are many legends and stories of persons who get all fussed up and distressed if they enter a room where there is, say, a cat, even though they do not see the cat. Of course these sensitive souls are actually sensitive to cat hair or dander, and probably suffer an anaphylactic reaction from inhaling a minute quantity of it on entering the environment of the animal. The source of such manifestation may be a dog, a parrot, a canary, a horse—if you keep a horse in your living room—or almost any household pet except goldfish.

Long before we learned that the nature of spasmodic bronchial asthma is always anaphylactic, it was common knowledge that certain subjects had attacks when they came into close contact with feathers, particularly the down of geese. With less strain on the scientific foundation than the fiction writers usually require, one might steal Eden Philpott's "Mystery of the Green Room" and select the words "anaphylactic" and "allergic," and still have a first-class yarn. Wonderful opportunity for the medical student detective to discover the indications of anaphylaxis in the proposed victims and even to put his theory to a test without giving away the solution until the proper moment.

Feather and down pillows became suspects long since; hair mattresses or upholstery was later condemned. In certain cases, now Dr. Grafton J. Brown finds that even kapok fiber (sometimes inaccurately called "silk down") is responsible for asthma in a few cases. It begins to look as though we shall have to restrict asthma patients to air pillows.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

Why Free Americans Wish No Fraternity With the Communists of Russia.

It is a strange thing to many of us in this section of Christendom that an eminent preacher of the religion of Jesus the Christ should embrace and express a political policy so utterly antagonistic to the Christian ideals of right and justice and humanity.

The recognition of the American government of the "Soviet Union of Republics" is to the extent of entering into diplomatic relations with them, exchanging ambassadors and opening to them the same relations as those obtaining between the United States and such nations as Great Britain, France, and the like, is an unqualified transaction to the great majority of the American people.

It cannot be done with safety by either of the parties that are to control this nation in the future as they have in the past. Some perverted statesmen with a platonic elephantiasis may advocate it as an act of commercial profit, and declare that it would involve no moral or national political commitments on the part of our people, but such claims are the thinnest veils of truthfulness. The refusal to recognize the Soviet Union is a widely diversified terrain, covering a natural and economic interests, a pure soviet system of local self-government would be an ideal organization of the . . .

The Conditions Which Restrict Us.

The reason why we cannot now reverse the financial principle of independence and self-determination and be democrats in fact, we insist upon wearing the tag when the spirit of the doctrine has been almost completely surrendered.

Democracy in Russia, operating in local tyrannies, has concentrated in a communistic despotism that is politically and morally more despotic than the despotism of the czaristic regencies. The conditions there recall the apostrophe in "Macbeth"—

With an untitled tyrant bloody scepter—

and many of us, when in high school, read in our Neros that "a common-sense cry that was conducted under the command of many masters."

Voltaire prefaced modern soviet Russia when he said "a company of tyrants is inaccessible to all seditions."

Here in America, and in Georgia, democracy may have largely disintegrated into indifference, inefficiency, and resort to growing dependence upon the centralized federal state, but still our national psychology is not willing to affiliate upon international equality with the type of high-bred, asphyxiated by Byron, who—

"Cabal and put men's lives out, as if life were no more than the feelings long extinguished."

In their accursed bosoms!"

The rank and file of Americans will not sell their souls to fraternize with the type of high-bred, asphyxiated by Byron, who—

SOUTHERN G. O. P.

CHALLENGES BROWN

with Postmaster-General Brown and the president's unofficial southern committee almost from the beginning. The general conference of southern leaders, which was held in New Orleans, will be confined to those elements in the party who were associated with Colonel Mann in his campaign efforts of last year, and who believe that "white supremacy" must be the basis of any permanent party organization in the south. It is intended to eliminate within the party the old elements which have dominated republican organization activities in the south in the past and which, it is claimed, have been recognized by Postmaster-General Brown and his associates in the present order of things.

Aimed at Brown Group.

In a word, the conference will be aimed at the forces which Postmaster-General Brown recognizes as establishing his own so-called patronage committees in such states as Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina and a few of others over the original committees set up by Colonel Mann. Thus, it is a continuation of the fight which the republicans have been waging since the friends of Colonel Mann on the one hand and those of the postmaster-general on the other for control of the party in the south.

The conference, it was stated, will be held in Atlanta. H. G. Hastings, manager of the regular republican campaign in Georgia, is expected to be one of the Mann leaders in the state, has already been appraised of plans, it was stated. He has consented to make for Atlanta, where a general convocation is said to have been discussed, the movement wholeheartedly. Mr. Hastings headed the original Mann committee appointed in Georgia, and was one of those to come to Washington in the spring to protest against the subsequent committee set up by Messrs. Brown, Newton and Burke.

Just when the conference will be held was not revealed, but the date is expected to be within the next 30 days, Chairman Callaway stated.

Voiled Threat.

Although veiled but commendation of President Hoover was contained in the statement, it is impossible not to read something of a direct threat against the administration in it. The effect of the promised Mann proclamation is to serve notice on the Hoover administration that unless there is a new deal in the recognized leadership of southern party affairs a revolt against the Hoover candidacy for re-election is inevitable.

The statement is clear to point out, for one thing, that the southern states, as a result of generous support given the republicans in the past election, will be entitled to 256 delegates in the next republican national convention, representing an increase of approximately 100 over the number held at Kansas City in 1928.

Warning is also served on the Hoover administration that there are three things which Mr. Brown and his associates can not force again upon the south.

"First, the south cannot be bought with a postoffice appointment. Second, the new leadership in the south which resulted from Mr. Hoover's candidacy cannot be overthrown by a vote of the people. Third, the south will be invited to secure this new organization in full fellowship with the party and this new party organization will build up a new party and under the ideals of white supremacy. When this happens the south will be in position to take its proper place in the administration of the affairs of this government. We will then have a 'more perfect union' which was the dream of the founders of this government."

"We men of the south, who fought to bring about the new order and to make Mr. Hoover president of this country have no bitterness in our hearts toward Messrs. Brown, Newton and Burke, though we have been shamefully treated by them. We prefer to believe that their ingratitude has been the result of political stupidity rather than a desire to strike the hand which helped them."

When we were at Kansas City last year fighting along by the side of these three gentlemen, we were told that they were the friends of the party, but when Mr. Hoover had been elected, they became our political enemies. I would like to say to Mr. Brown and to the other two distinguished gentlemen, that there are three things which will not happen in the south, namely: first, the south cannot be bought with a postoffice; second, the new leadership in the south which resulted from Mr. Hoover's candidacy cannot be overthrown by a vote of the people; third, the south will be invited to secure this new organization in full fellowship with the party and this new party organization will build up a new party and under the ideals of white supremacy. When this happens the south will be in position to take its proper place in the administration of the affairs of this government. We will then have a 'more perfect union' which was the dream of the founders of this government."

At the time of the election recently of Claudius Huston as chairman of the republican national committee, succeeding Mr. Hubert Work, resigned, word went forth that southern republicans and Hooverites identified with the Mann organization would be given a new deal. Colonel Brown, it was stated on responsible authority, would be given an office at headquarters of the national committee and in charge of southern affairs, displacing the activities of the Brown-Burke-Mann triumvirate.

However, this program may have progressed before the election of Mr. Huston, who formerly had been on intimate terms with the colonel, some of the southern republicans, who were there were denials from the Brown camp shortly. And now it is evident that someone has turned thumbs down on the suggestion of a new deal.

Taken as a whole, the Callaway statement, approved and guided by Mann and his lieutenants, means that the Hoover administration has decided to give his opponents in complete charge of southern affairs and that the colonel and his friends are determined to organize in each of the southern states in an effort to show the president that they are not the kind of a party which will be in charge of southern affairs, displacing the activities of the Brown-Burke-Mann triumvirate.

The statement.

Chairman Lincoln issued a proclamation which freed the physical south, but conditions immediately following the Civil War resulted in a political enslavement which has been very detrimental to all of the interests of the south. There will be issued within the next 30 days a proclamation which will emancipate the south politically. It will be issued by one of the most beloved and noble men who is a true and loyal republican and an unquestioned friend of President Hoover and the administration.

"The south supported Mr. Hoover because he personified all that the south believes in."

President Hoover's candidacy resulted in arousing a dormant impulse to such an extent that it overthrew the order of republican rule in the south and inaugurated a new party headed by clean, capable leadership.

After the election of Mr. Hoover, the old forces and old influences which had commercialized the republican party since the Civil War and which were overthrown last year, began to again assert itself and to seek control of the party machinery. This influence knew that it could not reach the president except through some of his friends in whom he had confidence. This adverse influence found a sympathetic ear in Messrs. Brown, Newton and Burke. They had sought to restore the old order of things in the south and have used the power of patronage to accomplish that result, but now they have either intentionally or unintentionally betrayed the best interests of the president in the south. Their efforts have failed and will fail, because the south cannot be bought or influenced against its best interest today through the medium of a postoffice appointment.

If You Know Yourself, You Know Adam

By Robert Quillen

Modern students of mankind observe that simple and unlettered people are happier than the learned, and reflect that knowledge robs men of their faith. Theirs is not a new discovery. An ancient book records the same truth. "For in much wisdom is much grief, and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow."

Moderns complain that crime flourishes impudently because the courts are slow to administer justice, but their complaint is not new. The ancient book says as much. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."

Moderns are vexed because mediocre men succeed while able ones meet with misfortune and failure, but the part luck plays is not new. The ancient book tells about it. "The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise nor yet riches to men of understanding . . . but time and chance happeneth to them all."

Moderns speak of men who "draw their sorrows," but the practice wasn't invented by moderns. The ancient book mentions it. "Let him drink, and forget his misery, and remember his misery no more."

Moderns scold gossip and the evil they do, but gossip isn't a new vice. The ancient book reveals the evil of it. "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so where there is no tale bearer, the strife ceaseth."

Moderns blame parents for the faults of youth, but the need of early training is newly discovered. The ancient book, gall warning. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Moderns think women control the home, but the ancients had their troubles, also, for the book says: "It is better to dwell in the wilderness than with a contentious and an angry woman."

Moderns are annoyed by pious hypocrites and regret that trustworthy men are so few, but the situation is not recent in origin. The ancient book described it. "Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness, but a faithful man who can find?"

"There is nothing new under the sun. The ancient and greatest of books reveals man as he is today, and the centuries have not lessened the value of its teaching."

Manly Ordered INTO COURT TODAY

generally appeared to be a normal, active man. All this, the federal agent told the court, took place up to the day Manley heard about his trial.

Saw Manley at Door.

Questioned regarding Manley's actions, the federal agent said that he remained in his room but was convinced that he was not confined to his bed. On one occasion, the agent testified, he saw Manley standing in the door of his bathroom. He hurriedly moved out of my view when he discovered that I was watching him from my room across the hall."

Describing Manley's routine, the officer told the court that the defendant's condition was good up until the afternoon of his trial on September 25, and that he was able to eat regularly, his body showing no physical blemishes. Vail also testified that Manley manifested no symptoms of physical pain.

Vail's testimony was corroborated by C. S. Cooper, in charge of the ward in which Manley has been confined at the Milledgeville sanitarium, and Harold Bailey, who has been Manley's personal attendant since about the middle of August.

Under cross-examination, the three physicians employed by the court said each offered practically the same testimony in connection with the banker's condition.

Dr. Binion Emphatic.

Dr. Binion appeared more emphatic in his testimony, however, declaring that in his opinion if Manley were brought into court at this time he might suffer an attack which might result in his death.

"In Mr. Manley's condition," Dr. Binion asserted, "it is likely to prove extremely dangerous for his nerves to be excited in any way. Considerable care must be taken by a patient afflicted with an enlarged heart. There always is danger of sudden death." Dr. Binion added that Manley's heart was enlarged half its normal size.

Dr. Binion said he had examined Manley twice, once in May of this year, just before the case was to be tried, and once on September 29. He said the first examination was made in his regular capacity as Milledgeville city physician, and that Mrs. Manley had paid him $200 several days later for his expert opinion as to Manley's condition. No agreement has been reached as to payment for the second examination, but Dr. Binion said he was not more than $200, the doctor said.

No Drug Knowledge.

Asked whether he knew anything about drugs being ordered by Manley in the name of his attendant, Dr. Binion said that he did not.

While the motion for continuance of trial was being heard, argument of a civil action, hinging on Manley's sanity, was presented in the adjoining courtroom before Judge Bailey. The circuit court of appeals for the fifth district.

FORD TOUR PLANES LAND AT CINCINNATI

Frances Harrell Injured as Ship Falls From 30 Feet.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 14.—(P)—Twenty-nine planes of the National Air Tour and 13 other aircraft accompanying them reached Cincinnati late today after a double hop from Atlanta, Ga. All but one were scheduled to leave tomorrow at 10 a. m., eastern standard time, for Louisville and St. Louis.

One of the planes was damaged badly by its pilot, Frances Harrell, Houston, Texas, aviator, who was severely injured when the craft crashed into the ground from a height of 30 feet as she was attempting to land it at the airport here.

The Texas girl flashed across the timer's line and started to bank to land down wind, when an unidentified army plane crossed her path. She banked again to avoid a collision and found her plane then diving toward a crowd of spectators on the ground. She swerved again and succeeded in escaping the crowd, but the gasoline supply of her plane gave out a moment later and the plane dove to the ground.

Hurried repairs were being made to the craft tonight, but it was not expected it could be put in shape in time to continue the air tour flight.

FORD AIR TOUR ROARS AWAY TO NORTH

Their roaring motors bidding Atlanta Goodspeed, the pilots of the 43 planes in the National Air Tour Monday morning took off at Candler field and, setting their course to the northwest, flew to Murfreesboro, Tenn., for a noon stop and Cincinnati for the night.

The fleet was increased Sunday with the arrival of the Cessna plane, No.

33, piloted by Joe Meehan, which had been delayed by a bent propeller, and the Lockheed Air Express of Captain Frank Hawks, which had been out of commission with a broken gas line. The Columbia Triad, an amphibian, piloted by Roger Q. Williams, trans-Atlantic flyer, was unable to leave. A longhorn was broken Saturday and had not been replaced. Another, a Bellanca, piloted by R. A. Nagle, was held back 30 minutes by a broken oil line.

Fourteen other airplanes accompanied the 29 ships competing in the tour for the Ford reliability trophy. Sunday, when the giant fleet was on exhibition at the flying field, it was viewed by a crowd variously estimated at from 45,000 to 60,000 persons.

Youthful Eloper, Taken From Lover Plans To Return

St. Petersburg, Fla., October 14.—(P)—Some day Mary Louise Lupton, 16-year-old high school girl whose sensational elopement to Central America attracted the attention of high state officials at Washington, hopes to be reunited with Luis Albert Ordonez, guitar playing Honduran, who dreamed with Mary of a comfortable little home in Honduras.

Mary confided this hope to a reporter of the St. Petersburg Times this morning upon her return from Honduras, where she was taken in custody by the American consul on orders from state officials.

Her lover, meanwhile, is in Trujillo, the home of his parents, who had laid elaborate plans for the wedding of Luis and Mary.

Mary and Luis eloped several weeks ago on a fruit boat out of Tampa. Her mother arranged for her detention by wireless. She came home today on the same boat.

Her mother, newspapermen and a local detective greeted her at the Tampa municipal dock. She will probably return to her studies in the local school, it was said today.

NO CLEWS FOUND TO MEN WHO SLEW NIGHT WATCHMAN

Investigation by detectives of the circumstances surrounding the murder of John Striplin, 53-year-old night watchman for the Monroe Bonded

JOHN STRIPLIN.

Warehouse, 1000 Marietta street, Monday night had revealed little, according to Detective John W. Lowe.

Striplin was found early Saturday night in the office of the warehouse in a dying condition by his son-in-law, E. L. Moore, 405 Moreland avenue.

Officers believe Striplin was killed by robbers, whom he had surprised while they were preparing to carry off some automobile tires on the second floor of the establishment.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Philadelphia Baptist church, near Jasper. Rev. W. R. Chambers and the Rev. W. M. Pruitt will officiate. Interment will be in the churchyard.

GIRL WITH SHOT LODGED IN BRAIN IS ABLE TO TALK

Columbia, Tenn., October 14.—(P)—Miss Mabel Hardison, 18, spoke today for the first time since she was shot more than two months ago by her lover, Gaston M. Sharp, 20, who then committed suicide.

Her first word was "daddy." Then she called the names of other members of her family, and in monosyllables expressed pleasure at being home after spending several weeks in a Nashville hospital.

Despite that a bullet is lodged in her brain, Miss Hardison said she was feeling fine. She is slowly recovering from paralysis of the right side. Her left eye remains closed, however.

Miss Hardison and Sharp left her home the night of August 7, ostensibly to attend church services. Several hours later they were found shot in Sharp's car. Sharp was dead, and Miss Hardison was wounded.

Sharp left a note in which he said he was tired of life and planned to kill himself and also Miss Hardison "because I love her."

ATTORNEYS ADVOCATE UNIVERSAL AIR CODE

Bar Association Hears Plea for Uniform Laws.

Memphis, Tenn., October 14.—(P)—Air traffic would be governed alike in all states, through a proposed measure that came up for study today before the conference of commissioners of uniform state laws of the American Bar Association. The aeronautical committee recommended a prison term upon conviction of any person who acts as an airman for any civil aircraft when flown in the state without holding an existing license.

The same would apply to any person who causes to be flown any civil aircraft without an existing license. Tennessee is one of the nine states which have no legislation governing aviation. The others are Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Nevada, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Utah.

Mayor Watkins Overton officially welcomed the first section of the bar association to Memphis and the commissioners immediately went into consideration of pending business. This section will be in session all week. Next week the other eight sections of the organization will open meetings here.

Uniform state laws covering divorce and marriage and child labor will be recommended to the general convention of the commissioners on uniform laws.

James E. Miller, Des Moines, Iowa, president of the conference, was presiding.

SHIP OWNERS QUIT LABOR SEA CONFERENCE

Geneva, Switzerland, October 14.—(P)—All the ship-owners' representatives—namely, those of 30 countries—withdraw from the international labor conference on maritime questions today.

The action was taken as a result of the defeat of their effort to have the conference instruct the governments concerned in similar conferences hereafter to appoint as the workers' representatives delegates from the seamen's unions.

The issue arose when the British employers' delegation declared that the British workers' delegation was not truly representative of British seafarers. The British employers, therefore, abstained from the conference from its beginning last Thursday. The other shipowners represented at the conference ranged themselves along the side the British and embodied their demands in a resolution which was defeated late Saturday night after a day and a half of debate.

WEST INDIAN VOLCANO AGAIN IN ERUPTION

Fort De France, Martinique, October 14.—(P)—Mont Pelée, famous West Indian volcano which overwhelmed the town of Saint Pierre in a disastrous eruption in 1902, burst into eruption at 4 o'clock this morning.

The volcano's activity was stronger than the last previous eruption, September 16. Some of the inhabitants of Saint Pierre, Morne Rouge, and Petit Fort left their homes. The governor of Martinique has taken all precautions for the safety of the people.

Didn't Know All About Ghost Talk

Mexico City, October 14.—(P)—A first-class working knowledge of the habits of ghosts sometimes comes in handy.

"Boo-oo, whoo-oo-oo, woof, woof!" groaned Salvador Espinosa when surprised by a watchman while making off with a headstone in the Dolores cemetery, at Tacubaya. The watchman, unimpressed, shot. Salvador dropped the stone and discarded a sheet he wore over his shoulders in order to get his hands lighter.

"I didn't think he shoot at a ghost," complained Salvador.

"Correcto," agreed the watchman emphatically. "But always the ghosts in Dolores go 'wich-swich-swich' never 'woof-woof.' Therefore, I shoot."

FILLING STATION MEN MAY STRIKE TO AID DRIVERS

New York, October 14.—(P)—The strike of the gasoline truck drivers threatened today to spread to the city's 4,500 filling station men.

Announcement was made at Local 533 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs that 2,000 of the filling station employees had requested William Collins, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, to organize them and call them out on a sympathetic strike.

The strike, which reached the stage of violence today, did spread in one unexpected direction, 60 Standard Oil substitute drivers hired to take strikers' places going out on strike themselves when refused a pay increase from $15 to $20 a day.

The violence occurred in Brooklyn, where men identified by police as strikers attacked a truck manned by substitutes. About 100 men joined the fray, armed with sticks and bottles, and someone fired three shots, seriously wounding a bystander, William Tuffy, 18.

COURT REFUSES TO REVIEW CASE LOST BY BANK

Washington, October 14.—(P)—The supreme court refused today to review the judgment for $28,000, with interest, given Edward Carter in a suit against the Old National City Bank, of Memphis, Tenn.

Carter, residing at Lynchburg, Va., visited Hot Springs, Ark., in 1920 and there met C. E. Collins, alias Harry Furay, who interested him in alleged stock transactions which developed into a confidence game.

Carter was persuaded after the scene of the swindle had been removed to Little Rock to return to his home for funds. He obtained two bank drafts for $10,000 each and $10,000 in Liberty bonds and was returning to Little Rock, when the swindlers of the confidence game, who had been in the rear of a hamburger establishment owned by William Watson.

Waddley died within a few minutes after the shooting. He was single and had been employed as a cotton picker. Boozer also was employed on a farm near here.

A coroner's jury returned an open verdict. Immediately afterward, however, warrants were issued for arrest of Bud Howard, charged with murder of Waddley; William Watson, charged with murder and operating a gambling establishment; Theo. Hall, charged with gambling and King Boozer, charged with attempt to murder.

The shooting, officers believe, was the result of Howard winning the "pot" of about $150. Others in the game attempted to take the money from him. He left the building with his money safe, the sheriff learned, but returned with a shot-gun and the shooting followed.

RITES FOR BUTLER WILL BE HELD TUESDAY MORNING

Winter Haven, Fla., October 14.—(P)—Funeral services for Charles Butler, evangelistic singer and entertainer, who was killed in a fall from a train here Saturday, will be held tomorrow in the first Baptist church.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. J. H. Griffin, pastor, assisted by Dr. C. W. Duke, Tampa; Dr. Dean Ancock, Orlando, and Dr. J. D. Dunsmuir, of Clearwater.

Persons from many sections of Florida are expected to attend the services for Mr. Butler, who for years was song leader for the evangelists. Sunday, Terry and Alexander, on their world tour. The body will be taken to Camilla, Ga., for burial.

BALL PLAYER IS SENTENCED FOR BIGAMY

Baton Rouge, La., October 14.—(P)—Judge George K. Fawcett today sentenced Tom Payne, Baton Rouge and Natchez, Miss. baseball player, to three to five years in the state penitentiary on a charge of bigamy. Payne pleaded guilty to the charge in district court last week, admitting that he had been wed in Arkansas prior to his marriage here to Miss Beulah Bree, who died two weeks after the ceremony.

TWO ARE KILLED AS PLANE FALLS IN ILLINOIS TOWN

Quincy, Ill., October 14.—(P)—William O'Neill, Quince pilot, and E. J. St. Onge, superintendent of the Kelly Atkinson Construction Company, of Chicago, were killed late today when their airplane crashed near here. St. Onge was in charge of building the Quincy Memorial bridge over the Mississippi river.

RESERVE AVIATOR GETS MERIT TROPHY

Lieut. Harry Sutton, Who Recently Resigned From Army, Given Award.

Washington, October 14.—(P)—Lieutenant Harry A. Sutton of the army air corps reserve today was awarded the Clarence H. Mackay trophy by Secretary Good in recognition of the most meritorious flight services performed by an army pilot in 1928.

Sutton, who recently resigned from the army, was awarded the trophy for conducting flying tests to determine the spinning characteristics of several types of airplanes that were dangerous.

Secretary Good said Sutton had obtained "valuable scientific design data" and that his "quiet, bawdy, intelligence, skill and spirit actuating the work" merited the highest praise.

Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut, president of the National Aeronautic Association, which has custody of the trophy, said at the presentation Sutton's work was neither spectacular or sensational because it was a type "that only those deeply engaged in the science and profession of aeronautics could understand and appreciate, nevertheless he was made an enormous contribution to the advancement of the airplane both as a military weapon and as a vehicle for commerce, sport and recreation."

Sutton, a native of Geneva, Neb., now lives in New York, where he is employed by an aviation company.

JEWELRY VALUED AT $2,500 TAKEN IN RAID ON HOME

M. R. Campbell, of 194 East Lake drive, was robbed of jewelry valued at $2,500 Sunday night, by a sneak thief who entered the home while the family was absent, according to police reports. A two-carat diamond ring was among the articles missing. Other missing pieces were a gold watch, gold wedding ring, two pearl rings, an antique gold bracelet, one pair of cuff links and a locket. Detectives could find but few clues to work on.

DANGER OF MASS PRODUCTION TOLD TO MANUFACTURERS

New York, October 14.—(P)—A warning against the danger of mass production and suggestions for education as a means to end destructive price reductions were expressed tonight at the close of the opening session of a three-day meeting of the International Association of Manufacturers.

A. A. Hadden of Chicago, manager of the western division of the Thompson & Lightner Company, Inc., technical advisers to the management engineering bureau of the association, declared that while mass production was developed as a means of economic production it now bids fair to overbalance its advantages by placing tremendous pressure on the sales department for sales and still more sales.

Catarrh Is Most Common Cause of Head Colds

Find a man, woman or child who is afflicted with catarrh of the nose and its connecting air passages, and you will always find a patient who is most susceptible to more serious diseases. Why? Science explains that catarrh interferes with natural breathing, thus preventing proper purification of the blood by the lungs and also prevents refreshing sleep. Catarrh is a constant drain upon the nutrition of the body, making the patient weak and thereby susceptible to diseases such as head and chest colds.

Your physician will tell you that catarrh is a local condition, not a systemic disease. You must fight it constantly with a local remedy that reaches the spot. Of the many remedies that have been tested by Nose and Throat Specialists to relieve the irritation and reduce the congestion of the mucous membrane the most effective and agreeable are those contained in the preparation, known to your druggist as Runion's White Wonder Salve. Applied in the nostrils, morning and night, Runion's White Wonder Salve gives quick and most delightful relief from the irritation and congestion. Clean, greaseless and absolutely stainless, Runion's Salve is a perfect example of the finest pharmaceutical art—a joy and comfort to everyone who suffers with catarrhal irritation of the nose and throat.

Ask your druggist for Runion's White Wonder Salve today or mail thirty-five cents for a family jar, postpaid. White Wonder Chemical Company, 51 Greil Bldg., Montgomery, Ala. Our slogan—"Perfect satisfaction or your money back."—(adv.)

FEAR.

Warren drew down the corners of his lips.

"Mrs. Cora Sefton," he muttered to Dorling's surprise.

"If you know that—" began Dorling and checked himself.

"Why don't I have her arrested?" Warren himself voiced the unspoken question.

"It is one thing to suspect—to know—that a person is breaking the law—quite another to prove it."

"Do you imagine, Douglas, that you can persuade this woman to betray her chief?"

"There won't be much persuasion about it," answered Dorling harshly.

He was relentless now that he had put out of his life Cecily and all that she stood for. "If you can have her flat watched right away—"

"That is already being done."

"And her telephone tapped," continued Dorling. "I will go to her and tell her that in half an hour—" thirty minutes exactly—I intend to give my information to you. During that half hour you can be pretty sure she will get in touch with her chief."

There came a rasping cough from Malleron that startled Dorling.

"I am a tyro in this work, my dear Warren, and I must confess that Lord Dorling's suggestion seems to me to be positively brilliant. The rank and file have their chance of escape—"

"Unless their chief lets them down and bolts for it," cut in Dorling.

"That, of course, is possible—theoretically possible," said Malleron.

"But as a student of human nature, Lord Dorling, I venture the opinion that this chief, is a man who has long ago learned that fear is a mere delusion."

"That is all very well—but it's all hopelessly illegal," objected Warren.

"Undoubtedly!" answered Malleron. "Lord Dorling's presence in this room is an illegality that we are both abetting. But in consulting me in various legal points in your campaign, my friend, you have made it clear that you cannot do much against—the chief by legal methods. As our friend has suggested, the chief has driven you to using his own weapons."

There was a short silence while Warren stroked his chin.

"What are his weapons?" he asked Malleron bluntly.

"Fear. Bribery. Finesse. But most of all fear. Himself untried, he rules his followers through their fear. Fear, it may be, of prison, of poverty, of disgrace. Fear. Always fear of something."

"He doesn't seem to have frightened Dorling into obedience anyhow."

Warren remarked with that in his voice that might have been personal pride.

"True!" croaked Malleron, and added: "Perhaps he has not yet tried."

There was an incisiveness in the last words that made both men stare at him. Malleron, as if unconscious of the impression he had created, got up with the intention of going.

"What exactly have you in mind, Malleron?"

"Eh?... O! Nothing. I am outside this turmoil, Warren. But—speaking wholly as an outsider—one is struck by the ease with which this young man apparently shakes off the formidable—er—gang—whenever he feels inclined. He is imprisoned—he escapes. He rescues your daughter" from their clutches. At this moment, it would seem, he holds them in the hollow of his hand... It is all outside my province—but I think—he does well to make his will. I am going to Bedford Row, Lord Dorling. Can I give you a lift?"

"Thanks, and I'll tell you what I want put in that will. Then I come to your office in an hour?"

"After you have seen Mrs. Sefton," agreed Malleron.

"Give me ten minutes to arrange for the tapping of the telephone," said Warren. "I'll see you next in Mr. Malleron's office, Douglas."

Scarcely had Warren given the orders for Cora Sefton's telephone to be tapped at the exchange, when Cecily came into the study.

There was that in her appearance to cause him alarm, a certain haggardness he had not noticed when Dorling and the young flying officer had brought her home.

"You're looking very far from well, my love. I suppose in the circumstances."

"Father."

He smiled. That was Cecily's way of telling him that she wanted to talk about something else.

"What is it, dear girl?"

"Did Douglas tell you that he and I are going to get married?"

"No—er—not on this occasion. The other day he more or less implied—"

"Well—we are."

Warren removed his spectacles and then absent-mindedly replaced them.

"Understand, Cecily, that I am not asking this question out of idle curiosity—I have a reason..."

Did Douglas ask you to marry him when he left this room this afternoon?"

"No. He told me he didn't love me in the least—apologized for having led me on—and hoped I wouldn't make a fuss over being jilted."

"Then—bless my soul, Cecily! Where are we?... A moment ago you told me—"

"Don't repeat it all—there's a darling daddy! Try and be just the finest bit brilliant."

"Really!—if you would condescend to explain, Cecily!"

Cecily turned her back on her father. She went to the window and stood as if her whole attention were concentrated on the passersby below.

"He gave me a lot of wonderful stuff about airmen being romantic and not meaning what they say to a girl—meaning me, Daddy. Her voice was perilously near to breaking but she hurried on: 'It was so frightfully well done that it took me in for the first minute or so. I—I had no idea he was such a convincing liar. It—it was pretty bad while it lasted—while I thought he meant it. Then, jink as he was leaving me, he overdid it. Some nonsense about having a chat over old times later on.'"

"But—what did you say to him?"

"Nothing. Just gave a strangled sob in the right places. I—"

"It was no good. Her voice had definitely broken."

"You're crying now, dear one," he reminded her gently.

"I know I am. I've been meaning to cry—for the last half hour."

Cecily, most modern of young women, slangy, hard as nails, was sobbing.

More About the Judge.

Kentucky Judge Holds Buyer Of Liquor Can Be Jailed Despite Recent Opinions

Plain Language of Bill Makes It a Crime To Purchase, Jurist Tells Grand Jury.

Louisville, Ky., October 14.—(P)—The purchaser of liquor is subject to indictment under the present prohibition laws, Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson told a grand jury which was empaneled in his court today.

The jurors were told not to hesitate to return indictments against buyers. "Don't feel hamstrung by any fear of hampering the government in indicting purchasers," the judge said. "They haven't given us a particle of assistance in the prosecution of cases."

Not a single purchaser of liquor, outside of undercover men, has given assistance in the prosecution of a bootlegger in the western district of Kentucky during the four years he has been on the bench, Judge Dawson asserted. On the other hand "these citizens who talk about 'my bootlegger,' encourage others to violate the law by selling, he said.

"I want to take this opportunity of correcting the impression, which seems to be general, that it is not against the law for individuals to purchase liquor," Judge Dawson said. "This misunderstanding, no doubt has been brought about by the wide publicity given to recent opinion of the circuit court of appeals of the second district.

"I have not read that opinion, but it is my understanding that what the court really decided was that one who purchases liquor is not such an aider or abettor of the seller as to make him guilty as a seller under the federal law.

"To that extent I agree with the opinion, but if that opinion holds it is not an offense against the national prohibition act for one to purchase liquor without a permit and not on a prescription, then I cannot agree with it, because I have no doubt whatever but that the Volstead act intended to and does, in express terms, make it illegal for individuals to purchase liquor for personal consumption for beverage purposes.

"Section 6 of the national prohibition act, among other provisions, declares: 'No one shall manufacture, sell, purchase, transport or prescribe any liquor without first obtaining a permit from the commission to do so, except that a person may, without a permit, purchase and use liquor for medicinal purposes when prescribed by a physician, as herein provided. . . . If the language just read does not prohibit the purchase of liquor by individuals for personal consumption for beverage purposes without a permit, then I am incapable of understanding the meaning of language,' Judge Dawson said. He then quoted penalties provided in section 29 of the act, among which was $500 for the first conviction, and added: "And these penalties apply to persons purchasing liquor for beverage purposes."

Program Marks Lighting of New Marietta Way

Marietta, Ga., October 14.—(P)—(Special).—Marked by a program which included exhibition of Marietta's lighting system and firefighting apparatus of 20 years ago, the new mile-long whiteway system on Church street was lighted tonight.

Progress of the city during the past eight years was reviewed by Mayor Gordon B. Gann. Councilman Lynn Baldwin also spoke at the celebration which was held at Church and Sessions streets.

An old lamp post and the fire truck used by Marietta 20 years ago were contrasted with the new whiteway system and the city's present modern firefighting apparatus.

Following the lighting of the whiteway, Mayor Gann entertained members of city council and members of the police force at his home.

TARIFF BILL HIT BY CONGRESSWOMAN

Mrs. Norton Declares Measure Now Planned Will Hike Cost of Living.

New York, October 14.—(P)—Mrs. Mary T. Norton, representative in congress from Hudson county, N. J., today told a luncheon conference here of the women's non-partisan tariff committee that the proposed Smoot-Hawley tariff bill now before congress "will increase the cost of living to an enormous extent."

"The cry is raised on all sides that the tariff protects the American workman," she said, "but people are awakening to the fact that it is a false cry, for just as the extra session of congress was supposed to help the farmer yet while giving him 10 cents takes 20 away from him, so also are the workingman and working woman the victims under this outrageous tariff bill.

"While a protective tariff may be necessary to protect the working man of the country, an exorbitant tariff helps to destroy him. He is not the beneficiary nor is he thought of by the framers of the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill. When the American family is taxed from 10 to 100 per cent on the necessities of life the wage-earner will certainly require a new deal to keep pace with living costs.

"Most of the industries asking for higher tariffs are, according to all published reports, in affluent circumstances, and it is difficult to understand why they require more protection."

Price was mayor for four terms several years ago. Mrs. Hawkins was elected last year.

Indoor 'Battle' Will Be Staged By Georgia Guard

Plans for the most pretentious and realistic indoor sham battle ever staged in the south and one of the most elaborate military shows ever seen in this section of the country were laid Monday by a special committee composed of officers of the 122d Infantry, Georgia National Guard, sponsors of the project.

The affair will be staged at the city auditorium on the night of November 27, and if preliminary programs are carried out it bids fair to be the biggest single event held in Atlanta in many months, according to Colonel George P. O'Keefe, commander, and members of a special committee from the guard; who will work with him to make it a success.

Other members of the committee are Captain Sterling B. Howard, Captain Frank W. Harrison and Captain Ben T. Hulet. The latter is aide-de-camp from the third ward of the city of Atlanta, and the city, county and state governments will be invited to co-operate to make the show a tribute to the high esteem in which the 122d, "Atlanta's own," is held throughout the state.

Every one of the dozen companies of the regiment will have a part in the program, and a real sham battle will be staged indoors, with competing companies arrayed against each other and with the auditorium armory itself as the battleground.

Following the order to cease firing, the grand march will begin, preceding the grand ball. This will start about 10:15 o'clock and the dancing will last until 1:30 the next morning.

Overseas maneuvers will be reenacted, and every unit of modern warfare possible to house in a single building will be in action.

ACTION ON BILL TO REGULATE FOOD DEALERS IS URGED

Washington, October 14.—(P)—Early action on the Borah-Summers bill to provide more stringent regulations for brokers, commission men and other dealers in perishable foods and fruits was sought in the house today by Representative Summers, republican, Washington.

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the republican leader, advised him to have the measure approved by the house agriculture committee, one of the four house committees organized at the special session. It has been passed by the senate.

Summers indicated he would do this. He argued the measure would interest a million farmers and affect agricultural products amounting to $2,000,000,000 annually.

EDUCATORS DECLARE WAR ON NEW WEALTH

Jacksonville, Ill., October 14.—(P)—Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, chairman of the University of Wisconsin, enlivened the four-day centennial celebration of Illinois college today by declaring, in effect, an educators' war on the influence of material wealth. The address, delivered before more than a thousand continental visitors, alumni and students, extolled Plato's republic which would give the wealthy no authority and the authorities no wealth.

"We are a newly rich people," Professor Meiklejohn said, "and we are in serious danger. All agencies of enlightenment are failing because we are rich. Riches and education are in conflict with one another. Material wealth blinds men's eyes. Shall the blind lead the blind?"

Likening America to a rich man's house, containing, besides the rich man, a tutor and a son, Dr. Meiklejohn branded as an evil the rich man's control over the tutor.

The speaker attacked "the rating of the United States as the greatest nation because it is the richest and Great Britain as the next greatest because it is the next richest." He said wealth had confused America and destroyed its sense of values.

"I would not destroy this new-found wealth," Dr. Meiklejohn explained. "I would destroy the confusion it has caused and learn how to use the wealth to make us a truly great nation."

"Can we have books which are not written for profit, newspapers untrammeled by influence of money, an art whose only motive is to depict things as they are, a preaching which has neither desire nor need to please, courts of justice whose integrity and impartiality are beyond the shadow of a doubt, institutions of learning which devote themselves to the study of whatever is important for human living and which report their findings with faultlessness and self-respect? I am not sure we have these things. It is a terrible, difficult task, and just now the current is running strongly against us, and yet perhaps we will win, for this I am sure—no one who is not struggling with that task can claim any share in the leadership of education."

County Commissioners Association Enters Caravan In Chattanooga Caravan

The Georgia Association of County Commissioners has entered an automobile in the motorcade which leaves Atlanta Monday, November 4, to celebrate the completion of the paving of the Atlanta-Chattanooga link of the Dixie highway, it was announced Monday.

The paving of the Chattanooga-Atlanta link completes the paving of this highway for its entire distance.

The association was represented in the original motorcade which opened the Dixie highway in 1914. Other motorcades in which the association participated were from Atlanta to Asheville, sponsored by the Appalachian Scenic Highway Association, and another when groups from Atlanta and Asheville met at Murphy, N. C., also sponsored by the Appalachian association.

The association of commissioners, whose object it is "to keep Georgia always ahead," will hold a convention at Valdosta, probably in April of 1930, to be called by President W. H. Wright. The association is working to attain a hard-surfaced road between each county seat in Georgia.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL TO BE BENEFICIARY

Debs To Stage Fashion Show At Biltmore November 18

An elaborately staged fashion show, the proceeds accruing therefrom going to the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital, will be sponsored by the Debutante Club of 1929-30, Monday evening, November 18, given at the Atlanta Biltmore. Miss Myra Boynton was made chairman of the fashion show at the meeting held yesterday at Miss Frances Barnett's home on Fourteenth street, and the committee assisting Miss Boynton will be Misses Peggy Poindexter, Susette Heath, Helen Beasley, Betty Davidson and Adeline Winston. The costumes for this interesting social event will be furnished by one of Atlanta's leading department stores.

Another important decision reached yesterday included the plan that on every Monday, between 10 and 12 o'clock, 12 debutantes will visit the children, inmates of the Scottish Rite hospital, and entertainment for the little shut-ins will be provided through games, toys, story books, and a story-telling hour. This charity was recently adopted by the club and the members are bending every effort to spread good cheer and happiness among the little patients. A move was made that, due to the large number of girls already composing the Debutante Club of this season, no more members would be added. The motion was voted on and unanimously carried.

VAPEX amazed scientists . . . its vapor kills cold germs

NASAL INFECTIONS
DELIGHTFUL VAPOR

VAPEX was discovered in England at the height of a terrible war-time epidemic of influenza. With new victims round them every day, chemists in a government laboratory were completely immune to the plague. Without doubt, the vapor from the chemicals now in Vapex kept them free from infection. . . . Physicians and scientists were amazed. For here was a swift, sure relief for colds. Highly concentrated, this new discovery was offered to the public as Vapex. . . . A drop of Vapex on your handkerchief gives a refreshing odor that instantly relieves colds. Breathed deeply, it clears the head, banishes congestion, limits the infection. Use it in the morning, Vapex keeps its strength all day. At night, a drop at each end of your pillow lets you sleep and fights the irritation then. . . . If you have a cold, use Vapex. See how simple, how convenient, how pleasant it is. Use it to prevent colds too. A bottle costs only $1 and contains fifty treatments, an average of only 2c a treatment. The Vapex essence is imported directly from England. Ask for V-A-P-E-X, and do not accept a cheaper imitation. . . . It is sold in all drug stores. . . . Distributed in the United States by E. Restless Children Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper, mild and bland as its tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than any powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults. That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

STRIPED CHIPMUNK'S SWELLED HEAD.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Whenever you may be in doubt, Ask someone what it's all about.

—Bowler the Hound.

Flip took a great deal of interest in Striped Chipmunk. At first he wasted considerable time trying to catch Striped Chipmunk. That, then, was his chief interest. But, having learned that Striped Chipmunk was quite equal to taking care of himself, Flip became satisfied merely to watch the bright-eyed little chap with the striped coat. He was worth watching, because he seemed to be always doing something.

It happened one morning that Flip was sitting some little distance from the hole on the edge of the driveway, where Striped Chipmunk was so often to be seen. At the moment Flip was not thinking of Striped Chipmunk. Very likely he wouldn't have thought of Striped Chipmunk just then but for the fact that he saw a little movement in the grass and, of course, instantly was all attention. If it was Striped Chipmunk over there, Flip proposed to remain right where he was. Of course, it might be some one else who didn't know about that hole. In that case, Flip might have the excitement of a chase.

that hole. The instant he saw it, Flip said to himself: "It's Striped Chipmunk!" You see, he recognized the striped coat and the tail. But when he had a good look at the little figure, sitting up beside the hole, Flip wasn't so sure. In fact, he rubbed his eyes twice. He couldn't believe that he really saw what he seemed to see. "If that is Striped Chipmunk," muttered Flip, "what under the sun has happened to him? There is something dreadfully wrong with him. His head is all out of shape and twice as big as it ought to be. I have seen him a good many times, but I have never seen him look like this!"

Before Flip could move, Striped Chipmunk gave a funny little twist to his head and disappeared in that hole. Flip remained right where he was and kept watch. He wanted to see Striped Chipmunk come out. He didn't have long to wait. The head of Striped Chipmunk suddenly appeared just above that hole. The little fellow took a look all around and then he jumped and away he ran. This time Flip was sure that there had been trouble with his eyes, for there seemed to be nothing at all the trouble with Striped Chipmunk. His head looked just as it ought to look. Flip was very puzzled. Flip forgot everything excepting Striped Chipmunk. He crept just a little bit nearer to that hole and lay down. He didn't go near enough to frighten Striped Chipmunk, but he did go near enough to see better.

Striped Chipmunk was gone for some time. When at last he did return Flip saw just what he had seen in the first place—a head all out of shape and twice as big as it ought to be. It looked as if Striped Chipmunk must have a toothache or the mumps on both sides at once. Certainly, his head was all swelled out. As before, Striped Chipmunk turned his head sideways and disappeared in that hole. Flip was terribly impatient for Striped Chipmunk to reappear. It seemed as if he were gone a long time, though really it was only a few moments. When at last Striped Chipmunk's head did pop out of that hole Flip just couldn't help giving a little yelp of excitement, at which Striped Chipmunk promptly disappeared. You see, there was nothing wrong with Striped Chipmunk's head this time.

"There are two Chipmunks there," declared Flip to himself. "That must be it. There is one who has nothing the matter with him, which probably is Striped Chipmunk, and there is another who has got something the matter with his head. I wish they would both come out at the same time."

MAYOR, SHERIFF QUIT POSTS IN TEXAS TOWN

Borger To Be Freed of Military Rule After Officials Resign.

Borger, Tex., October 14.—(AP)—Martial law in Hutchinson county was climaxed today by announcement of the resignation of Sheriff Joe Ownbey, and Mayor Glenn Pace of Borger.

Brigadier General Jacob Wolters, in charge of Texas National Guard troops, said that in view of this move he expected the county to be freed of military rule Wednesday or Thursday.

No successors were immediately appointed but General Wolters said he expected the county commissioners and the Borger city commissioners to fill the places of Ownbey and Pace within the next day or so. The general announced he expected the city commissioners, J. W. Crabtree, and J. E. Higgins, to resign after they had appointed a mayor with the approval of Clem Calhoun, new district attorney.

The resignation of Ownbey, General Wolters added, would automatically from office all of the sheriff's appointees.

General Wolters' announcement came on the heels of the convening of the county grand jury by Judge E. J. Pickens. In a 45-minute address, the jurist told the inquisitorial body that its investigation would enumerate every crime in the penal code of Texas, and asked the jurors to use every lawful means available to rid the county of its criminal elements.

Martial law was declared for Hutchinson county September 30, after Texas rangers, sent here by Governor Dan Moody to investigate the slaying of John Holmes, had alleged there existed in the county a conspiracy between certain county and city officials and a criminal element.

A'S BEAT CUBS, 3 TO 2, AND WIN SERIES

HAAS' HOMER GIVES MACKS FINAL GAME

Bing Miller Doubles With Score Tied To Win Deciding Battle.

By Frank Getty,
United News Sports Editor.

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, October 14.—(United News) In as dramatic a finish as any world series ever knew, the Philadelphia Athletics became baseball champions of the world today.

Coming from behind in the last half of the ninth, the Mackmen hammered their way to victory, defeating the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 2, in the fifth and final game of the series.

Held scoreless for eight innings, the new world champions broke loose in a furious batting rally which Pat Malone, who had pitched so gamely and so well, was powerless to check.

While the crowd, caught up by the spirit of the rally, went into a frenzy of joy and President Herbert Hoover, in a front row box, beamed and beat his hands together noisily, the Athletics scored three runs to win the game and the championship.

HAAS STARTS RALLY.

A tremendous home run over the right field wall, hit by "Mule" Haas with Max Bishop on first, tied the score with one out in the A's half of the ninth. The blow was startling and unexpected, for Malone had let the Mackmen down with only two puny singles in the first eight innings.

But there was more to come. A storm of Philadelphia cheers swept around Malone as he returned grimly to the box. Pat forced Mickey Cochrane to roll weakly to Rogers Hornsby for the second out. It looked even then as though a tie was the best the Mackmen could get in this inning.

Al Simmons looked one over and then slammed a double up against the score board in right center. The excited Cubs, who had seen their hopes of victory in the fourth game disappear in a very similar sort of rally, gathered around Malone and Captain Charlie Grimm ordered a deliberate pass for Jimmy Fox to next batter.

So Fox walked on four pitch outs. This brought up Bing Miller, the fleet right-fielder who once was sent away by Connie Mack because he wasn't good enough for the A's.

MILLER DOES IT.

It was a tough spot for Miller, but Bing proved just the man for the moment. The first pitch was a ball, high and inside. The next two were strikes which cut the outside corner of the plate while Miller waited with his bat on his shoulder.

Then a ball, low and outside. The pandemonium in Shibe Park was deafening, with every man on his feet except the police line group around President Hoover.

Malone, white-faced, shot the next pitch towards the outside corner of the plate, not quite so high. Miller swung hard and connected cleanly, the ball shooting out like a rifle bullet between Hack Wilson and Kiki Cuyler, while Al Simmons came racing home from second, leaping and dancing with joy as he crossed the plate.

CROWD GOES WILD.

Forgetful of its manners in the presence of the nation's chief executive, the crowd, which had been asked to keep its seats until the presidential party departed, burst through the barrier and swept out on the field, where the Athletics' players, coaches and trainers, were prancing about like derelicts.

Bing Miller and the others who had contributed the winning punches were pounded on the back and carried, struggling happily, from the field on the shoulders of shrieking fans and beaming teamsters.

Head hanging, Pat Malone walked unnoticed through the milling throng, one friendly pat on the shoulder from sorrowful Charlie Grimm and Pat ducked into the dugout and made for the clubhouse, following the rest of the Cubs, who had gone down gamely to such unexpected defeat.

CONFIDENT AT START.

There had been no hint of any such calamitous climax to disturb the Cubs earlier in the game. They faced Howard Ehmke, the veteran right hander, who struck out 13 of them in the opening game, and faced him with confidence and spirit.

Moreover, the whole Chicago team looked better than before and Woody English, who had four errors in the first three games, was playing like a demon in short field, cutting off potential base hits and putting pep into the whole Cub defense.

In the fourth inning, with two out, the National League champions got to Ehmke and drove their former conqueror from the box. Kiki Cuyler opened up the firing with a double to right center. After Hornsby had rolled to Boley and Wilson had doubled an easy foul to Cochrane.

TAYLOR STARTS IT.

Stephenson walked and Grimm jammed a single to right center, scoring Cuyler. Zach Taylor, whose all-around work in this series deserves more praise than the excitement attendant upon the climax permits, singled over second base and Stephenson scored.

This was enough for Ehmke, who, after all, did not bite in the opener, and Babe Walberg, lanky left hander, came in from the bullpen to take up the pitching burden.

And so well did the Rube perform that he allowed but two widely separated hits and struck out six batters. The Cubs never had a chance to score again, not that they knew they needed one.

When Captain Grimm struck out in the ninth, an even 50 Chicago batters had fanned during the five games of the series, a new record. The previous total was 44 strikeouts to the discredit of the New York Giants in the six games of the 1911 series with the Athletics.

In the final analysis, the Philadelphia Athletics warmly deserved the world championship which now is theirs after so many disappointments.

Some may have reached a stormless, unruffled corner Sunday wherein to sit and review the astonishing two-day melodrama of last week-end, but not this two-finger typist.

And by now all has been said that could have been said in the weekly airing of conclusions and opinions and adjudications.

Georgia Tech's football brotherhood already have trampled the memory of defeat by North Carolina under their feet as they prepare for the irruption of Florida.

The Jackets cannot fail to recognize the opportunity to get back in the race.

One defeat may not mean much this year. It is probable that nearly everybody worth while will drop a decision somewhere. The field is crowded with good teams.

NOT ALL INSPIRATION.

Georgia was limited by some commentators to playing an inspired game and one might infer that the Athens Red Hats simply arose in a sort of religious fervor like wild tribesmen and escaped death at the cannon's mouth by divine interference.

My impression was that the Athens boys played wide awake, intelligent, restrained, cohesive football and won on pure merit. They remembered everything they had been taught and executed it well.

The inspirational fervor was there, but it never beclouded their sense of balance. Weeping zealots never play clear-headed football like the Georgia Bulldogs did. They were inspired, but not maudlin.

TRANSPORTATION PERFECT.

And what a masterful job Athens folks accomplished in handling that crowd—Athens folks and the railroads. Why, I heard a gentleman say yesterday that he had seen vastly more confusion in Athens on the day of, say, a Tulane-Georgia game than he did Saturday.

Careful, unhurried planning months in advance did the work. Athens is firmly set on the football map as a city that can handle big sporting events in a big way. The future of Sanford stadium is assured as a "major league" game site.

The railroads worked unselfishly in planning their trains and getting them into and out of Athens expeditiously. One rarely pauses to thank Big Business nor to see that occasionally Big Business is swayed by altruistic motives, by dictates of the rarefied spirit of public service.

WHO IS BOBBY JONES?

Bobby Jones and a party of Atlantans leaving the field after the game commandeered transportation to the station in a motor truck. Their conveyance was caught in a traffic jam and stopped for a while. A gentleman who had looked on the corn when it was not on the cob stood staring for a moment at the truck party. Finally he addressed Bobby rather thickly:

"Hey, haven't I seen your picture in the paper?"

"Maybe," said Bobby.

"What is your name?"

"What is yours, may I ask?"

"Williams is my name," he fumbled gravel, in his vest pocket. "Here's my card."

"My name is Bob Jones."

"Fine, Mr. Jones, where are you from?"

"Atlanta."

"Well, that's a good town. . . I know a lot of Kiwanians over there. . . I belong to the Kiwanis Club at home."

"So do I."

"Well, Mr. Jones, I am glad to have met you and if you are ever in Macon and need some cement look me up."

All this was relayed by Herbert Porter, who happened to be in the truck.

MEHRE "PASSED" WELL.

One day last year just after the Georgia team had thrown a forward pass that was intercepted and run back for a touch-

Wayward Boye, the Man Without a Mind, attempted a non-trot drive over the highway from Athens to Atlanta last Saturday after the Yale game. The above action picture resulted. Wayward was totting Kenneth Rogers' camera in his lap when his dark-horse bolted and threw him out on a section of unimproved road, the other side of Windsor. The crash, when Wayward landed, snapped the camera and preserved the picture for posterity, if any. Wayward submits the photograph as symbolic (I think that's the word) of the eventful Saturday. Cheating the Series Turnstiles at Philadelphia

Here is a view of the crowd at Shibe park watching the series games played in Philadelphia. The City of Brotherly Love baseball fans paid $5 per seat for a view of the

MISS MADDOX LOW IN MEET

Turns in 84 To Lead Qualifiers in Women's Championship.

By Westbrook Pegler.

Philadelphia, Pa., October 14.—Edmund Miller, who says he comes from a place called Vinton, Iowa, took a lurching slap at a baseball about 3:15 p. m. today. Edmund knocked the ball a long way into right center field and while it was sailing and bobbing along the grass, Al Simmons came tearing around from second base, tossing divots from his flying cleats to score standing up with the run that won the world series for the Athletics. It was the concluding run of a 3 to 2 score, which gave the Athletics their fourth game out of five.

Before Edmund had rounded first, the mayor of Philadelphia, the Hon. Harry Mackay, yelled "Yow, excuse me, yow, yow, yow," and ran away from his excellency, the president of the United States. There was intense excitement. The honorable Mackay left his official guest, Mr. Hoover, with his lips still open on some word that he was about to say, and dashed across the infield, throwing away his hat as he ran, and continuing to yell "Yow, yow, yow" until he caught up with Edmund Miller and flung his arms around him.

All was confusion. Edmund's colleagues of the Philadelphia ball club closed in on him like a lynching party and if you had not known they were friends of his you might have laid 8 to 5 that the boys would have him torn apart before they could rope him up.

Edmund Miller has been traveling out of this place which he calls Vinton, Iowa, to minor and major league training camps in spring for so many years that the best of the shower baths have worn the hair of his head to a mere fringe around a shiny, freckled and nude spot as big as a plate. That fringe is gray now and as major league ball players go Edmund is what you might call elderly. He is a natural brunet with a deep, mature complexion and Daniel Howley, late manager of the St. Louis Browns, a man who has invented more irritants that annoy his competitors than anyone else since the best days of George Stallings, always called him Booker T. Miller.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT.

Miss Margaret Maddox, defending her city woman's golf championship, was low Monday over the Capital City Club course in the qualifying rounds of the annual event. Miss Maddox's score was 84. Second place was equally shared between Miss Rosalie Mayer and Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, with 86 each.

Sixteen players were placed in the championship flight and the defeated eight in the first round will form the consolation flight.

All first-round matches will be played today over 18 holes and second-round matches will be played Wednesday. All rounds will be over 18 holes.

Mrs. O. B. Keeler and Mrs. W. D. Deak are in charge of the tournament and Howard Becker and Willie Livingston, club professionals, will assist.

SECOND FLIGHT.

Mrs. Roy Burns vs. Mrs. Jesse McDaniels, Mrs. C. C. Glover vs. Mrs. Carlisle Fraser, Miss Martha Bell vs. Mrs. Robert Schwab and Mrs. Fred Garrett vs. Miss Margaret McIntire.

THE WHY OF "BING."

Anytime, most people know him as Bing Miller, the Bang being a souvenir of his early days with Connie Mack when he thumped a parcel of home runs. Nowadays he doesn't thump very many homers and they have dropped him down to No. 6 in the batting order.

That slap of his in the ninth inning was a special and particular slap only on account of the conditions existing at the moment. He has hit many a longer blow but never in his life before did Bing slap one in the ninth inning of a world series with the score tied, the winning run waiting on second and the president of the United States sitting in a box to watch him.

The Athletics had been dubbing long, unable to inflict much bother to winning a game for himself and sending the president of the United States sitting in a box to watch him. ### Yale Rehearsal.

New Haven, Conn., October 14.—(United News).—The Yale varsity had a signal rehearsal today to start the week of work before the Brown game. A lecture by coach Stevens and another by coach Walsh wound up the session. What the coaches described as glaring faults displayed in the six games were discussed.

HAAS' HOMER UP.

Then George (Volgar) Haas, the roughest man in the American league, came up. As he advanced to the plate Vulgar Haas uttered an offensive remark. I cannot depict this remark because it was so vulgar.

YALE DEFEAT IS NOT ALIBIED

Critics Berate New System of Attack Devised by Stevens.

Yale's defeat at the hands of Georgia is not being alibied at Yale today, according to a symposium of comment of New York writers Monday, compiled for The Constitution.

Chick Mehan, head football coach of New York university, comments as follows:

"The under dog team, fighting as gallantly as those southerners do, wrenched a victory from Old Eli in convincing fashion. They had gotten over their early defeat by Oglethorpe and a blocked kick, a safety and a pass resulting in a touchdown, enabled the toy Bulldog of Georgia to defeat the big Bulldog of Yale for the second time in six meetings.

"We meet Georgia later in the season and it looks as if there will be plenty of difficulty in Smith, Waugh, Rothstein and Captain Boland, for they consistently outgave the heavy Yale eleven."

CAME A CROPPER.

Allison Danzig, writing in the New York Times:

"Yale, for all its modernism, Albie Booth and its new system of line play football folk, and that one may look with some confidence for a change in Yale's system, with Adam Walsh, ex-Notre Dame star, becoming the actual head coach, albeit under his present title of line coach."

"The Georgia game brought out very clearly that Mal Stevens' hybrid offense—a hodgepodge of Notre Dame line play, Warner starting formations, and running and passing developments which conform neither to Notre Dame line play nor Warner starting formations—was a complete flop."

"Of the many unexpected happenings of Saturday the triumph of Georgia over Yale was the most striking."

ALEX PREPARES TEAM FOR HARD TILT SATURDAY

Monday Afternoon Brings Dummy Scrimmage. Drill on Pass Attack.

By Herb Clark.

Fleet backs, whose ball-carrying ability has given many a coaching staff nights of sleepless tossing and a line which has shown enough strength to shake those backs loose into an open field, are bounding towards Georgia Tech.

And Coach Bill Alexander and his cohorts are going through the worrying stages. Florida plays Georgia Tech at Grant field Saturday afternoon.

Georgia Tech did not show up any too well against the Tarheels of North Carolina Friday, who were primed for the battle.

Monday afternoon on the Rose Bowl field Coach Alexander started in to drill his charges in preparation for the Gator attack.

The session yesterday was the usual opener. Dummy scrimmage and an open drill on pass attack and defense occupied the varsity, with the linemen taking a little defensive practice and playing with the tackling dummy.

Off in a corner of the field Pipo Martin and his punishment-absorbers, the Grey Devils, listened to a lecture on the Gator system and ran through a number of the plays which Bachman's squad is expected to shoot at the Jackets Saturday. This afternoon, and Wednesday afternoon, the Grey Devils will shoot these maneuvers at the Jackets in scrimmage.

Th Jackets will take the field Saturday without the services of possibly three members of the varsity squad. Doug Graydon, fast-stepping halfback, will be on the bench barring an unexpectedly fast improvement in the condition of his foot. No bones were broken in his crash last Saturday, but a ligament was badly stretched. Mike Chambers, jacket trainer, is of the opinion that Jabot, will be the side lines until the Tulane game.

"Shag" Williams, reserve end, will be out of the game for the balance of the season. His injury is also of the ligament variety, but it was in the kneecap, and will be sufficient to remove him from the eligible list. "Rock" Holt, varsity tackle, may also be out of the Gator battle with two sprained ankles.

Yearlings Meet Monroe Aggies. Monroe's Aggies will make their annual appearance at Grant field Friday afternoon to give the Junior Jackets of Georgia Tech their first test of the season.

Kid Clay, mentor of the Tech yearling squad, has a wealth of material at hand and has been working his charges hard for the past several weeks.

He settled to work on the last week of practice before sailing into action with a long scrimmage on the lower end of the Rose Bowl field Monday afternoon.

While a few scrimmage injuries have laid members of his squad up on occasion, Clay has his full quota out for this last drive, and, barring accidents, will be able to throw his full strength against the Aggies.

The Flying Petrel

This is Cy Bell, who is having a big season in his last year as an Oglethorpe half-back. Old Man Cyrus galloped 62 yards a couple of weeks ago against Georgia to give his team a surprising victory over the conquerors of Yale. Last Friday night at New Orleans, Bell did a good job of lugging the football when Oglethorpe tied Loyola of the South under the floodlights.

GATORS TOLD TECH WILL NOT BE EASY FOE

Bachman Drives Squad in Preparation for Game Here Saturday.

Gainesville, Fla., October 14. — (Special.) — With all eyes turned Atlantaward the University of Florida gridders got down to the grim business today of completing preparations for the Georgia Tech battle this week-end.

Some of the enthusiasm which has been sweeping the town and campus since the victory over the Tarheels last night, where the Gators ran through a long signal drill. Head Coach Bachman opened the evening practice by admonishing the squad as follows: "There's going to be a ball game in Atlanta this Saturday. If any of you gentlemen think it's going to be a tea party—you'd better hand in your suits tonight."

NON-VOLUNTEER. None volunteered to relinquish the well-worn mole skins and a vicious session ensued.

Three full teams ran through formation directed by Bachman, Holsinger and Van Fleet.

On Murphy field, adjoining Head-scout Nash Higgins drilled his Omelets in Tech tactics. A heavy scrimmage between the varsity and the varsity is scheduled for tomorrow.

The first team lined up tonight much the same as it did against Auburn. The revamped backfield consisted of Red Betha, at left half, Royce Goodbread at right half, Ed Sauls at fullback and Clyde Crabtree at quarter. Van Sickle and Hall were at the tackles, James and Steele at the guards and Haines at center. Although it is not certain this will be the starting lineup Saturday, it is a good guess that Florida will use this team against the Jackets' best. For here are the strongest men in the 'Gator squad, the strongest physically at least—and there is every reason for believing Bachman will put his most rugged players against Tech, a team known for its drive and determination.

CLARK RETURNS. Frank Clark, first string center, was in uniform tonight for the first time since the Southern game. He ran through formations with the second varsity but he will not play at Atlanta. He has not yet recovered from a knee injury and is being held as heavy as Weber Haines or Ben Clemens. Although Haines had the call at the pivot post tonight it is certain Clemens will get into the Tech battle. He played a sterling game against Auburn at Montgomery and is in wonderful physical condition.

Captain Rainey Cawthon worked at fullback with the second varsity. He was in uniform with Sauls Saturday. Sauls seems to have the call at the moment because of superior line plunging ability. Cawthon is better perhaps at defensive work. Both are going to need power in abundance against the Tornado.

NO INJURIES. No additional injuries have been revealed as a result of the Auburn game and barring accident this week-end the Gators will be in fair condition physically for their first supreme test of the season.

Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the university, a former Vanderbilt player and later prominent in Southern athletic circles, watched the workout. He was one of a half dozen persons not in uniform permitted on the field. The coaches demanded absolute secrecy and with the aid of canvas fencing Fleming field was completely hidden from prying eyes. Dr. Tigert expressed keen interest in the coming contest and declared he expected to be in Atlanta when the battle opens.

Special Planned For Tulane Game

An all Pullman special train of 12 cars will be run to New Orleans, La., October 20, for the Tech-Tulane game. It was announced Monday by the Atlanta and West Point railroad.

The special train will leave Atlanta at 7:30 o'clock Friday night, October 25, and arrive in New Orleans at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. It will leave New Orleans at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon and arrive in Atlanta at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Arrangements for the game are being planned. The first of the parties to be completed is that of Marietta, and is headed by J. R. Brumby. There will be 25 persons in Mr. Brumby's party, it has been announced.

A special rate of $15.00 for the round trip has been authorized and tickets will be honored for all regular trains Thursday, October 24, and for all regular trains Friday, October 25, including the special. Tickets will not be honored on the Crescent Limited either from Atlanta or from New Orleans.

Tickets will be good on trains leaving New Orleans at 9:30 p. m., Saturday night, for all regular trains and the special train Sunday. The train from New Orleans on which the tickets will be honored will be train number 4, leaving there at 9 o'clock Monday morning and arriving at Atlanta Monday night.

Tulane Squad Has Easy Week

New Orleans, October 14.—It was a day of rest for the Tulane Greenvies Monday following their rather easy victory Saturday over Mississippi A. & M. Tomorrow, however, coach Bernie Bierman plans to send the squad into scrimmage with plenty of work out for the next two weeks. The Wave has only Southwestern Louisiana as opposition this week-end.

Monday was not entirely an idle day, however, as coach Bierman had the squad together early in the evening for a last blackboard drill. The team apparently is in fine condition with the Georgia Tech game but two weeks away.

The SPONTANEOUS SPORTSMAN

From the Camp of the Beaten.
I have learned something well worth while
That victory could not bring—
To wipe the blood from my mouth and smile
Where no one can see the sting;
I can walk, headup, while my heart is down
From the beating that brought its goad,
And that means more than the champion's crown,
Who is taking the easier road.

I have learned something worth far more Than victory brings to men,
Battered and beaten, bruised and sore,
I can still come back again;
Crowded back in the hard, fast race,
I've found that I have the heart
To look rank failure in the face
And train for another start.

Winners who wear the victor's wreath,
Looking for softer ways,
Watch for my blade as it leaves its sheath,
Sharpened on harder days;
Trained upon pain and punishment,
I've groped my way through the night,
But the flag still flies from my battle tent
And I've only begun to fight.

Heavy Artillery.

They crack with an even louder roar next Saturday—California and Pennsylvania, Army and Harvard, Illinois and Iowa, Michigan and Ohio State, Princeton and Cornell, Yale and Brown, Georgia Tech and Florida, N. Y. U. and Penn State, Fordham and Holy Cross, Notre Dame and Wisconsin, Tennessee and Alabama, Pittsburgh and Nebraska, Stanford and Oregon State, Columbia and Dartmouth, Georgia and North Carolina—and that is only a start, including Minnesota and Northwestern. Here is the chance to do a lot of fancy guessing where more than one proud, unbeaten banner will flop and flutter into the dust, or mud, as the case may be. Few days in football will bring about more action. Few days will have as vital a bearing on the season's ranking.

The Army and Harvard are rated as two of the strongest along the Atlantic coast. Six leading Western conference teams will figure in decisive contests. In the south Georgia Tech, Florida, Tennessee and Alabama are four of the strongest entities, and two will have to go. Even November will have a tough time over matching this occasion.

Having tackled Indiana and the Navy in order, Notre Dame now has nothing to face this Saturday but Wisconsin. And her schedule is just warming up.

Our Western Scouts.

Dear Sir: A lot of big boys are playing this game of football. Michigan's ends, Truskowski and Draveling, each weigh 200; Bob Zupke has a pair of giant tackles in Gordon, 246, and Hill, 220, while Temple's guards win the prize. Davis, who plays one side of Temple's line, weighs 310, with Patchefsky, on the other, tipping the beam to 296. Fred Barratt, of Ohio State, is the most obese center, with his 245 pounds, while Herbie Fleischacker, of Stanford, is our quarterback, with 218. Go pick yourself three other backs to match this bunch and you will have a team that can knock down anything in the country.

THE LANCE CORPORAL.

Dear Sir: Lonnie Stagg's young son Paul seems to have inherited much of the ability the old man showed for Yale long about the time you were a senior. Paul never played high school football, but came out for quarter back at Chicago, and is going to win the job—after a little experience. He already is the best handler of punts on the team and seldom misses a tackle.

Dear Sir: Michigan has found a real halfback in Roy Hudson, a sophomore who weighs better than 135 and can kick, pass, run and smash. He is going to pair up nicely with Joe Gembs, Simmal, Morrison and Wheeler, and give Michigan the best back field it has had in several years. This Michigan team will be plenty rough and tough before snow falls.

ROGER BERWALD.

Harvard and the Army. This game should be one of the best played in the east, west or anywhere else. One of the best from the viewpoint of hard, smashing football, where the Army's fine backs will be sent against a strong Crimson defense, featured by one of the best forward walls Harvard has had in many years.

Even Eagle and Murrel will have their day of trouble against this line, so it will be largely a matter of Harvard's pass defense.

AUBURN LOSES TWO PLAYERS

Auburn, Ala., October 14.—Two more members of Auburn's 1929 football team have decided to turn in their uniforms. Alternate Captain Porter Callahan, halfback, and Ray Trim, senior sophomore quarterback, are the latest Tigers to bid the gridiron farewell for the season.

Callahan is a senior and probably had played his last football game. He had one of the brightest futures of most any moleskin wearer that has ever matriculated at the Plains. He was one of the sophomore sensations in 1927 being especially remembered for his 96-yard run through the Tulane Greenvies for a touchdown. Dime hard luck has camped on his trail and he has never been able to put forth his best efforts for Auburn since his varsity debut. He was injured the early part of the season, and this injury has never completely healed so he decided to forsake the gridiron.

Trim is a promising sophomore, who was expected to do the strong arm passing for the Tigers this season, but decided not to take chances of ruining a brilliant future on the diamond by receiving a permanent injury in football. He is one of the best looking southpaws that has ever worn the Orange and Blue baseball uniform.

Despite his two recent losses Coach Bohler is carrying on with his Tigers hoping that they will continue their fighting spirit against the strong Vanderbilt eleven when the Plainsmen meet them in Birmingham Saturday. Auburn's two conference games this season have shown the fans that the 1929 Tigers are really eleven players that are fighting every minute of the game, who it is bound to take them victory if they continue to show their never-die spirit.

Rockne Recovers From Infection

South Bend, Ind., October 14.—(United News.)—Knut Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, was reported recovering tonight from a serious infection.

A leg began to swell while he was watching a football game October 5. The condition, apparently caused by aggravation of an old injury, became so critical that it one time amputation of the leg was considered.

The swelling began to recede today, however, and it was expected Rockne would be back with his team on the gridiron before the end of the week.

Buckles Down.

New York, October 14.—(United News.)—Columbia got down to its hardest week of practice today, looking to the Dartmouth game, which will be the first big test for the Lions. The squad came through the Wesleyan game in fine shape.

Old-Timer.

RED AND BLACK VARSITY GIVEN REST MONDAY

Mehre Plans To Use Regulars Only Short While Saturday.

Athens, Ga., October 14.—While part of the varsity squad was waging an offensive war against one of the freshmen teams, the Georgia varsity, the men who bore most of the burden in Georgia's 15-0 victory over Yale were resting.

After light limbering up and running exercises, Head Coach Harry Mehre sent his first string team to the dressing rooms, and will not let them take part in the scrimmages until Wednesday.

The entire squad is in good condition, but the Georgia coach believes that it will take several days for the players to regain all of the energy which they lost before and during the Yale game.

With this in mind, Coaches Mehre and Thomas started building another team which will probably carry Georgia's hope in the first southern conference game. The boys who beat Yale Saturday will play some and no doubt will be anxious to go the entire route, but no team, however, good, can play two such games as was turned in Saturday successive weeks. And it is the common opinion that such performance will be necessary to remove the Tarheels from the Bulldog's path.

DOWNS GINNES.

The playing of Georgia's little quarterback, Austin Downs, has caused much rejoicing around Athens. The Georgia coaches, players and students have been loud in their praise of the way in which Downs directed the plays against Yale. With very few exceptions every play which he called Saturday appeared to be the right one. Especially does his work seem remarkable when one recalls that the players as well as the spectators were under great emotional strain. Then his ability to return punts is the best that has been found on a Georgia team since George Morton left the field after the Georgia-Tech game in 1923. Downs is a fast and shifty man with the ball as well as a good director of play.

In Vernon Smith, Palmer, Maffett, Red Smith, Kelley and Timmons, Georgia has one of the best group of ends in the conference. Attempts to gain around the Bulldog's flankmen have been very unsuccessful this year. And much of the credit for the strength of the Georgia flank is due to End Coach Chick Shiver, who has stuck at his task like a freshman sticks to his cap. Coach Shiver has spent almost an hour a day since the beginning of practice instructing his candidates in the art of fighting off interference, with the result that the Georgia ends are very seldom taken out of the play.

All Good.

S. I. A. A. Grid Teams Spend Busy Week-End

Birmingham-Southern Surprises Association With Overwhelming Defeat of Mercer.

By Ben Cothran.

While Georgia was making faces at Yale and Tech was losing to North Carolina during this dizzy week-end which has just passed into the limbo of eternal gossip, S. I. A. A. football teams were busy as a housewife at a remnant sale knocking members of teams out of the 1929 race.

The dirty work is scheduled to continue this week-end with a few promising games on the card. One member of the conference will make a journey to St. Louis, Oglethorpe going up to play the university of that city.

Prominent among the happenings of last Saturday was Birmingham-Southern's overrunning of Mercer at Birmingham. The score was 39 to 7, a very great deal higher than expected although Mercer, after being tumbled by Presbyterian college a week earlier, wasn't favored to win.

Southern uncovered a powerful offensive that was quite heartening to Birmingham partisans and the team blazoned out with improved blocking, interference and line play. That leaves the Birmingham team in good shape to play Chattanooga next Saturday. The Moccasin team a terrible beating from Alabama's heavy line last week, but should recover in time to fight its S. I. A. A. opponent in satisfactory fashion.

STARS OUT.

Mercer, meantime, is in Macon preparing for Howard college, which has been mixed up for the past two weeks in scoreless ties with S. I. A. A. teams, the first tangle coming Friday when they were returning from Birmingham ran off a fill near Jonesboro. The men will be out for some time.

Centre college, up in Kentucky, kept its mad pace by disposing of Morris-Harvey, of West Virginia. The score was 60 to 0 and was the largest Centre has run up since 1924. The Colonels gained a total of 450 yards, Georgetown, of Kentucky, aided by Mosley's 70-yard gallop, defeated the "B" team of Indiana, 13 to 6.

At Memphis, Southwestern took the Western Kentucky teachers to ride, 12 to 6, when Henry Walton struck his leg arms up in the air, grabbed a pass and went down beneath a mass of tacklers on the right side of the goal line.

FURMAN WINS. Furman, still suffering from the Georgia tramping, subdued small, aggressive Presbyterian college, 12 to 0, in a hard scrap.

Citadel, conqueror of Oglethorpe, lost to V. M. I. of the conference. The margin was small, 12 to 6, and showed that Citadel is to be reckoned with in the association this fall. Oglethorpe, rebounding admirably from its loss to Kentucky Wesleyan, displayed a better offensive, tenacious defense and held strong Loyola to a 0-0 tie under the floodlights at New Orleans Friday night.

Louisiana college stopped heavier Union by 19 to 7, Transylvania defeated University of Louisville, 9 to 0; High Point nosed Newberry, 2 to 0; Mississippi Teachers bowled over Marion institute, 34-0; Miami trampled Kentucky Wesleyan, 24 to 0, and Es-kine pounced on Wofford, 18 to 0.

MISTAKE COST MICHIGAN GAME, ZUPPKE SAYS

Failure of Field General to Mind Orders Won for Purdue.

By Robert C. Zuppke, University of Illinois Football Coach.

Champaign, Ill., October 14. When you have a good lead in football, play it safe and use your punter to keep the ball in the enemy's territory. Don't risk forward passes which may be intercepted. One fumble and you may be lost.

This is a hackneyed wisdom, of course, but it is often forgotten by the best of quarterbacks. If Michigan's field general had remembered that Coach Harry Kipp undoubtedly had cautioned him to keep in mind at such a juncture, Michigan might have been defeated anyway, but I refuse to admit that Purdue could have scored four touchdowns in the final period.

Michigan, leading 16-6, at the close of the third period, threw a pass, which was intercepted and started the fireworks. I remember an Illinois-Vanderbilt game in which our downfield game the same way. Genies of Michigan, a good punter, should have punted the minute the Wolverines had exhausted their three downs on conventional plays. I must admit the proposition of the Purdue victory astounded me.

BACKS STRONG. I gave Purdue a good chance to win because the backs were better and Welch, Yumewich and Harrison all played great ball. But on Purdue it looked as if Michigan's line was stronger and this seemed to entitle the Wolverines to the odds.

Four touchdowns against Michigan in one period—the rest of us will have to go over to Purdue and get the secret from Coach Jimmy Phelan. In the Michigan-Illinois series in the last four years, Illinois has scored two touchdowns, and Michigan one, the Wolverines also making four field goals.

Ohio State's defeat of Iowa, generally picked to win, resulted when Ohio State blocked a punt and gained the extra point after touchdown, which Iowa failed to do when the Hawkeyes scored.

Wisconsin's defeat by Northwestern, which surprised all the gamblers including me, was due to its line, which charged too high on defense and too low on offense. The Wisconsin line failed to follow the ball. The over-confidence of the Wisconsin men also played its part but Northwestern marched 40 yards to score and deserved victory.

Chicago's victory over Indiana was regarded as an upset, but I thought the Maroons might surprise everybody. Chicago is better than was generally thought and Indiana showed the effects of the emotional strain caused by the Notre Dame game. Chicago is not a world beater but don't underestimate the Maroons.

Minnesota's 15-6 win against Vanderbilt was not so close as the score might indicate and the Gophers showed power. Their line stood up well and Brockmeyer, a valuable back, led a dangerous attack.

Notre Dame's success against the Navy confirmed the impression that Rockne is much better fixed than last year, but Knute will probably agree with me that they have been too highly praised at the start. Not that they will not do a lot of things but their Indiana win does not look so impressive since Chicago turned the trick as well.

A. A. C. Members Meet Tonight

Members of the Atlanta Athletic Club will gather tonight at 8 o'clock at a called meeting at which time the membership of the club, green fees and other matters of importance will be discussed. All members are requested to be present.

A motion picture of Georgia Tech's victory in the tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Cal., will be shown at the meeting. Scott Hudson, president of the club, announced. Full attendance is urged by Mr. Hudson.

Howard Next For Morehouse

Morehouse college's Maroon Tigers, fresh from a victory over the Knoxville college, started a week of hard practice for their intersectional clash with Howard university Saturday afternoon on the Morehouse field.

A heavy scrimmage is slated for today between the varsity and subs. Monday's workout was a long drill in tackling. Morehouse's forward wall will average around 180 pounds and will be composed of five letter men.

Howard university, with an almost new team, will leave on its invasion Thursday night, arriving Friday afternoon. It is expected that 30 men, two coaches and the team physician will make the trip. Hampton Institute of Virginia, handed the Howard aggregation a crushing defeat in the opening game, October 5. Johnson C. Smith, defeated the Howard team Saturday by a one-sided score of 19-0.

Homecoming day will be observed Saturday by Morehouse.

game at Minnesota, should take Auburn. The Plainsmen are playing better football this season. They have the potential power to upset a team if they get going.

Vanderbilt should win. Sewanee, defeated in its first conference game Saturday at L. S. U., needs Cumberland. Cumberland should be easy, but the Tiger is not so robust himself. Pick Sewanee.

AN EASY ONE. Kentucky, after beating Washington and Lee, takes on an easy one in Carson-Newman. Tulane rests before the Tech game—meeting Southwestern Louisiana, already defeated by L. S. U. in easy fashion.

North Carolina will meet Wake Forest and the game should give the Wolfpack a victory by a wide margin.

INTERSECTIONAL. Duke supplies the intersectional game, going east to meet the Navy. The Navy, unless battered too much by Notre Dame, should win by a couple of touchdowns.

The South Carolina members take it easy, the university meeting Presbyterian and Clemson taking on Wofford.

Virginia is expected to continue winning against V. M. I., although the Cadets will be difficult to get out of there.

Washington and Lee will be second choice with West Virginia and V. P. I. is likely to drop one to William and Mary. Maryland, weak this year, should trim Gallatin.

Princeton Rests. Princeton, N. J., October 14.—Princeton's varsity with every man in perfect condition despite the hard struggle with Brown on Saturday, will rest today.

GEORGIA SQUAD IS UNDERRATED, ROPER WRITES

Early Season Upsets of Major Team Surprising to Tiger Coach.

By W. W. Roper, Princeton Football Coach.

Princeton, N. J., October 14.—There were some startling surprises in Saturday's round of games. The defeat of Yale by Georgia, Fordham's runaway score against N. Y. U. and Brown's great comeback against Princeton, were the outstanding features of a Saturday full of thrilling football.

I was astonished at Yale's defeat, and I felt all along the Yale players had several hard hurdles to overcome. I underrated Georgia because of its early season defeat at the hands of Oglethorpe. The Georgia players outdid themselves and probably showed the best form of the year.

The background and psychology of a football game plays a very important part in a contest—much more than many anticipate. In the first place, Yale's runaway victory of 59-0 against Vermont was a handicap instead of a help. I always studied when a Princeton team is unfortunate enough to run up a large score in an early season game. Nothing hurts the morale of the players more.

DESERVED VICTORY. This score against Vermont could not help but affect the Yale team. The 26-hour railroad journey to Athens, Ga., was also a handicap, and on top of this, the weather, which was warmer than anything the Yale players had been used to.

I am not minimizing the fine play of the Georgia team. The Bulldogs played a great game and deserved to win. But I do not want anyone to imagine that Yale did not have a terrifically hard job in their trip south.

Fordham surprised everyone by defeating N. Y. U. 26-0. I knew Cavanaugh had a strong team, as his freshman eleven last year was a powerful one, but I didn't anticipate such an impressive victory.

The Fordham players stopped Follett very successfully all afternoon and diagnosed the N. Y. U. offensive shift with great accuracy. This victory was a well-deserved tribute to Coach Cavanaugh's tireless work with the Fordham team.

DISAPPOINTED. I was naturally disappointed at the Princeton-Brown result but I congratulate Brown on their plucky exhibition. Brown completely outplayed the Tigers in the first quarter. Brown's quarterback helped to make the left side of the Princeton line and sent his plays against that flank with telling effect.

Brown used the short kick, forcing the Princeton line to play with a criss-cross either inside or outside of tackle, completely baffling the Princeton guards, tackles and ends. While the Princeton line was a touchdown in the first quarter, they had the ball in scoring position and early in the second quarter had little difficulty in scoring.

Nebraska came back and defeated Syracuse, 13-6. Nebraska got away to a slow start last Saturday while Syracuse ran up a big score. Big scores count for little in present-day football.

Colgate showed a great deal of power in defeating Michigan State, 31-0. Harvard had no difficulty with New Hampshire, one of the strongest of the small New England college teams. The all-around play of the Harvard line and backfield was impressive. I was astonished at the size of the score in the Holy Cross-Rutgers game, as I looked for a very close contest.

REGULARS START. Notre Dame got off to a slow start against the Navy. The Middies scored a touchdown in the opening quarter against the Notre Dame second team, but when the regulars got into action, the Navy was outplayed though not outfought. The Notre Dame team functioned very smoothly. Martin Brill, formerly of Pennsylvania, was a tower of strength in the Notre Dame backfield when he got into the game.

Penn's backfield is not what it was last year, but the team has lots of drive and enthusiasm. Amherst and Lowell Textile played a high score game, Amherst winning, 33-25. Amherst has some good backs and will be heard from before the season is over.

Williams had little difficulty with Bowdoin, winning, 27-6. Virginia won a hard-fought victory over Swarthmore, 12-7. Harvard showed good defensive strength against Susquehanna. Columbia swamped Wesleyan at Baker field by a score of 52-0. With six veterans on their team, they were able to put up a strong offense, which was too much for their opponents. Joyce and Hall were the outstanding players.

CAGLE IS STAR. Army winning from Davidson, 23-7, showed it had power, though they were outplayed in the first part of the game. Cagle was again the star for the Army.

Dartmouth completely outplayed Allegheny, winning by 33-0. Masters, Wolf and Clark were the outstanding players. It looks as if Dartmouth will have a successful season.

Washington and Jefferson won from Bucknell, 14-6. The game was fairly close, but Butler's fine interference for W. & J. and Brumbaugh's long runs were outstanding.

Georgetown won from St. Louis, 13-0. Georgetown was able to score two touchdowns against St. Louis in the first quarter, then the St. Louis defense strengthened and held the Washington boys scoreless the rest of the game.

Gettysburg and Lehigh played a 7-7 tie. Both teams scored via forward passes, and there was little to choose from between the teams.

Lafayette defeated Manhattan, 23-0, with little trouble. Socolow and Woodfin were the star players for Lafayette. Manhattan did not prove as strong as the Eastonians feared. They were never in danger of scoring.

Penn State took Marshall, 26-7. Friedrich making all scores for State. The Marshall team completed several passes in the second quarter but was able to score only once.

Temple kept up its good record by defeating St. Bonaventure, 28-0. It looks as if Temple will also have a good season.

When Philly's Mayor Deserted the President

cause this typewriter cannot produce sound effects, but it is a noise which the baseball players bandy back and forth from bench to bench during the season and the intent is strictly comical. Vulgar Haas addressed himself to Mr. Malone and took a most prodigious swing with his bat. The baseball sailed clear over the right field wall, falling just short of the row of houses where bleachers had been mounted on the roofs. The extraneous customers across the roadway hove up with a roar that joined the mad clamor within the ball park and the stress of their rising seemed likely to bring down the old brick dwellings.

Vulgar Haas jogged around the bases. Bishop paused between second and third to shake his hand and then pattered on before him. The score was 1-0 and Pat Malone walked up to the plate, chattering angrily with Zack Taylor, his catcher. "You asked for that one," he yelled, showing off his jaw, and for just a moment there I thought Pat was going to haul off and paste old Zack one.

"I know it," Old Zack said, soothingly. "But how was I to know? We've just got to beat down now and then, win it back in the tenth. You're the one who can do it."

MALONE UPSET. But Mr. Malone was seriously upset. Cochrane grounded out, but Al Simmons hit a double off the scoreboard and that brought up the problem of Jimmy Fox, the Maryland plow boy. Mr. Malone paid him the honor of a very deliberate base on balls to get at Edmund Miller, which was a subtle insult to Edmund. Then it happened and the world series was over in as mad a moment of tumult as ever took place on a ball field. The mayor left the president and went whooping across the yard. Hack Wilson dragged himself slowly back and was the last man off the field.

And finally, after it was all over and the crowd had gone and the baseball writers were beginning to snarl the latches on their portables upstairs, an old policeman standing in ranks on the first base line keeled over, apparently dead, from the strain and excitement. They couldn't find a doctor now so after chaffing and rubbing him on the ground for 10 minutes the rest of the platoon picked him up and carried him away.

Tom Shibe, a brisk, busy little job in an hour glass overcoat, with the awning of a big felt hat pulled low over his eyes, bothered around the base line like a school girl listening for the door bell on Friday evening when the time approached for the president to ornament the occasion with his presence.

That way, little Mr. Shibe must keep his head thrust well back to see ahead and this automatically imparts a cocky thrust to his chin and a military, swagback curve to his spine. This must be the reason why military cadets wear uniform caps with visors running down their noses. Mr. Shibe owns the Philadelphia baseball firm which does the show business of the baseballs and most of the other play material used by the two major leagues.

Brown used the short kick, forcing the Princeton line to play with a criss-cross either inside or outside of tackle, completely baffling the Princeton guards, tackles and ends. While the Princeton line was a touchdown in the first quarter, they had the ball in scoring position and early in the second quarter had little difficulty in scoring.

A LONG, HARD JOURNEY. Down the road about an hour Saturday, a countryman boarded one of the special trains from Atlanta, Athens bound, and took his seat in the midst of the noisy, disheveled crowd.

"Where did this train come from?" the new passenger asked. "Atlanta," he was told. "You mean to say that you all just left Atlanta a while ago?"

"Yes, just an hour ago." The countryman shook his head sadly and declared: "Why, you folks look like you've been traveling since early yesterday morning."

HARVARD-ARMY TILT FEATURES SATURDAY CARD

Two Strong Teams To Clash at Cambridge Game.

By L. S. Cameron, United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, October 14.—Next Saturday's football schedule abounds in outstanding games, especially in the east, but the feature contest of the day promises to be the Harvard-Army game at Cambridge, despite the fact that neither team has met serious opposition in the three weeks of the season already past.

When Army plays any major event it is an outstanding game, not only because the standard of the cadet teams generally is high but because of the all-important football items of "color," which West Point squads always seem to possess.

Leading the Army color will be Captain Cagle, the most colorful backfield man since Grange and Friedman. While Harvard appears to have no one outstanding player, the football experts are saying that Coach Arnold Horween is about to come into his own at last after preliminary years of careful installation of his system at the Cambridge school.

SHOWS POWER. Harvard won easily from Bates and New Hampshire in the practice games, and showed a wealth of latent power. Putnam and Gilligan, quarter and halfback, respectively, have been the chief ground-gainers.

Army has a record of three emphatic victories. Boston University, Gettysburg and Davidson have been the victims. Cagle has shared backfield honors so far with Johnny Murrel, West Point's giant fullback.

New York will have a game of more than passing interest in the meeting between Dartmouth and Columbia. Al Marsters, brilliant Green halfback, after a poor season last year, has been a fresh sensation in the 1929 play. He holds high-scoring honors of the east. The points, however, were made against rather easy foes. Norwich, Hobart and Allegheny all were defeated by Dartmouth, and by large scores. Dartmouth has made a total of 188 points in three games. That indicates a real scoring attack.

BRILLIANT GAME. Philadelphia will be the setting for another brilliant game. Penn is meeting California. Penn's uphill struggle to beat Virginia Poly on Saturday may make the Quakers the underdogs against the Golden Bears, California, however, was held to a 0-0 tie by St. Marys.

About 30 photographers jostled along in a pack a few paces astern of the party, wasting much footage and many plates on southerly exposures of one another as they tried to fix their sights on the president.

As Mr. Hoover walked outside the square formation of constabulary, going several yards outboard of the file to avoid chafing the blue abdomens which now protruded to an imposing degree, some of the photographers cut across the square and waylaid him as he came down the third side of the formation to enter the box reserved for him in the grandstand, between first base and third base. Meanwhile, in the absence of any band, the office boy in charge of the music for the world series, put a new record on a phonograph connected with the announcing machine in center field. The record was scratchy and anyway, the citizens of this republican community were setting up a right noisy cheer for the people's choice, so the welcoming selection sounded much like a jewsharp solo in a Pullman vestibule.

Not even for the president did Mr. Shibe's baseball firm squander any funds on hunting, music or other gala fold-out familiar to the world series in other times and places. There was one flag standing out from the mast at the extreme right end of the left field pavilion roof. A workman picked his way along the tar papered ridge to haul it down for a ceremonial raising, when the president should arrive.

At this point, a daring young man stuck his head over the right field wall, waved through the barred wire strung along the top and dropped onto the field, unmolested by the vigilant Philadelphia police force, most of which was manfully restraining the arriving customers from going one way or another. Leaving a small, but important fragment of his pants on the wire, the young man flattened against the wall for obscurity and scuttled toward the grandstands.

He was almost there before the officers noticed him. A portly constable set out after him, his billowy form undulating violently as he ran but several of the regular customers, sitting in the front row of the pavilion, became accessories to his crime, leaning down and hauling him into their midst where he lost himself from the law.

DILEMMA. As the officer turned away amid disrespectful jeers from the multitude, if the Philadelphia ball yard can be said to hold a multitude, another head and body cautiously rose through the barred wire at the top of the wall to this time the gallant defender of the majesty of the statutes, standing just below the young man and waving his stick in eager manner. "The crashed found himself in what is commonly known as a fix. If he turned back he would leave most of his wardrobe, the young man dropped onto the field where he would not see the world series. If he went further, there was the officer."

He must have been a salesman, for he squatted on the ridge of the fence with the barbs gently pricking him where he squatted and submitted his case to the patrolman rather than evasion or violence. After much argument the officer, ceasing to swing his stick, evidently paltzing with crime and, finally, the young man dropped onto the field where the policeman took a nominal grip on his coat sleeve and escorted him toward an exit, presumably to judge him out with his boss.

But they reached the border of the left field crowd, the prisoner gave a sudden wrench and dashed up an aisle. A second brazen challenge to the orderly government just before Mr. Hoover came in.

The arrival of the president was hailed with a gasp of surprise of surprise but rather unaccustomed and therefore inept jump. A file of policemen stood in a square formation and presently a fat officer wearing a growth of mouse-colored hair, who promptly snapped into military attitudes, contracting their necks, protruding their stomachs and reducing the beat of their jaws on their chewing tobacco to half time.

THE PRESIDENT. The president came next, walking briskly, attended by a little man with a purplish complexion and a thin growth of mouse-colored hair. There were three women under unimpressive male escort, stepping along a few paces to the rear, wearing orchids, the distinguishing device of all ladies of unusual importance at sporting displays. The gentlemen in waiting were identified as William D. Mitchell, the secretary of agriculture; Dr. Joel Boone, the presidential physician, and two secretaries to the president, Walter Newton and Lawrence Richey. The ladies were said to be Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Harry Mackay, the lady mayoress.

About 30 photographers jostled along in a pack a few paces astern of the party, wasting much footage and many plates on southerly exposures of one another as they tried to fix their sights on the president.

As Mr. Hoover walked outside the square formation of constabulary, going several yards outboard of the file to avoid chafing the blue abdomens which now protruded to an imposing degree, some of the photographers cut across the square and waylaid him as he came down the third side of the formation to enter the box reserved for him in the grandstand, between first base and third base. Meanwhile, in the absence of any band, the office boy in charge of the music for the world series, put a new record on a phonograph connected with the announcing machine in center field. The record was scratchy and anyway, the citizens of this republican community were setting up a right noisy cheer for the people's choice, so the welcoming selection sounded much like a jewsharp solo in a Pullman vestibule.

Randolph Pays Visit to Flats

Bob Randolph, plunging fullback of the 1928 Golden Tornado, was a visitor at practice Monday.

Bob, who was to have coached at Furman this fall and was rendered ineligible after an auto accident near Athens shortly before the opening of the season, is still on the crutches necessitated by the crash.

Bob plans to report to Furman for spring practice and may assist Dad Amis next fall.

Fowler Leads Jaycee Tourney

Forest Fowler, with a 77, was medalist in the qualifying rounds of the annual Junior Chamber of Commerce golf tournament which is being played over the West End course. Other low scorers were Mitchell Benton, M. M. Anderson and W. V. Kingdon.

Only eight players were placed in each flight and there were enough players to complete five flights. First round matches will be played today, with the semi-finals Wednesday and the finals Thursday.

A loving cup will be awarded the winner and runner-up in each flight, as well as a cup for Forest Fowler. Leg trophies were donated by Haas-Howell for the championship flight; past presidents' trophy for the second flight; Zaban Transfer and Storage Company trophy for the third flight; and Zachry Clothing Company trophy for the fourth flight.

The tournament will end with a dance at East Lake Country Club Friday evening, October 18, from 9:30 to 1 o'clock, where the trophies will be presented to the winners of each flight.

Star Lost.

Charlottesville, Va., October 14.—(United News)—Captain Jimmy Sloan of the Virginia Cavaliers is out of the game for at least three weeks with a foot fractured in Saturday's Swarthmore game and placed in a cast today. Hunter, Motley, tackle and Bill Byrd, end, both letter men, also are on the bench with injuries.

He holds high-scoring honors of the east. The points, however, were made against rather easy foes. Norwich, Hobart and Allegheny all were defeated by Dartmouth, and by large scores. Dartmouth has made a total of 188 points in three games. That indicates a real scoring attack.

BRILLIANT GAME. Philadelphia will be the setting for another brilliant game. Penn is meeting California. Penn's uphill struggle to beat Virginia Poly on Saturday may make the Quakers the underdogs against the Golden Bears, California, however, was held to a 0-0 tie by St. Marys.

arriving customers from going one way or another. Leaving a small, but important fragment of his pants on the wire, the young man flattened against the wall for obscurity and scuttled toward the grandstands.

He was almost there before the officers noticed him. A portly constable set out after him, his billowy form undulating violently as he ran but several of the regular customers, sitting in the front row of the pavilion, became accessories to his crime, leaning down and hauling him into their midst where he lost himself from the law.

DILEMMA. As the officer turned away amid disrespectful jeers from the multitude, if the Philadelphia ball yard can be said to hold a multitude, another head and body cautiously rose through the barred wire at the top of the wall to this time the gallant defender of the majesty of the statutes, standing just below

High Lights in the Cotton Market

BY THEO. H. PRICE
Editor Commerce and Finance, New York

The government estimate of the cotton crop published October 8 was 1,915,000 bales. These figures were probably about 200,000 bales over current expectations. The world's consumption of cotton is now estimated at over 25,000,000 bales a year or nearly 500,000 bales a week. The difference between the government figures and the average guess was, therefore, less than half a week's consumption.

In this view of the figures there seems to have been but little justification for the decline of about 40 points that followed the publication of the agricultural department's report. The resiliency of the market since has shown that the trade is disposed to buy largely on cotton approaches 15c in the south.

The most interesting aspect of the figures submitted by the crop estimating board is to be found in the relation between the ginning up to October 1, and the estimated crop as of that date. From the statistics published it would appear that 5,000,000 bales had passed through the gins up to the close of business on September 30. This is about 39 per cent of the estimated crop of 14,915,000.

As the ginning up to the end of September was not published prior to 1924 we have no extended record with which to compare these figures, but the showing for the last six years is as follows:

Year	Total crop, million bales	Ginning up to Oct. 1, million bales	Percentage of crop ginned
1924	15,600,299	4,228,000	27.1
1925	16,122,516	4,210,000	26.1
1926	17,753,679	5,415,000	30.5
1927	12,782,112	5,845,000	45.8
1928	14,296,549	4,961,000	34.7
1929	14,915,000	5,965,000	40.0

From the foregoing tabulation it is plain that the ginning reports will shortly become the determinant of public opinion with regard to the size of the crop. The ginning up to September 30 has hitherto averaged about 28 per cent of the yield, and crop estimates will be increased or reduced as reports published hereafter indicate a variation from this percentage. Therefore, it is advised that the ginning reports be closely studied, for a substantial increase in the crop estimates would undoubtedly have some effect upon prices, although any severe decline seems to have been made impossible by the general improvement in the textile trade that is reported particularly in the United States.

The Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York announces that sales of cotton goods during September were 128.3 per cent of production, and that the unfilled orders on September 30 showed an increase of 25.6 per cent during the month. These figures supply a conclusive answer to the pessimists of the textile industry, and they ought to be studied in detail by all manufacturers. A complete copy of the report will be sent upon application to all those who write us asking for it.

The textile outlook in Europe is also improving. Premier MacDonald's conferences with President Hoover and the long era of peace that they seem to assure have inspired the English-speaking nations with a confidence in the future that appears to be spreading throughout the world, and those who produce and manufacture the cotton that has become an essential of civilization ought to share the blessings of an era that promises to be one of the most prosperous that the world has ever enjoyed.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN No. 50

Weak from terror, Rokoff watched the figure of the silent, struggling ape-man disappear beneath the river's surface to unthinkable death in the slimy mud below. As he realized the good fortune that had befallen him, a cruel smile of relief and triumph touched his lips. But it was short-lived! For just as he was congratulating himself he was now safe indeed, a mighty pandemonium rose from the river bank.

There he saw standing upon the shore, glaring at him with hate-filled eyes, a devil-faced panther, surrounded by the hideous apes of Akut. In the forefront of them stood a giant black warrior, who shook his fist at him and uttered terrifying threats. The Beasts of Tarzan had been slow in following their agile master. The ape had reached the river just as Rokoff struck Tarzan.

Grim, relentless and terrible, the pack followed Rokoff day and night. His flight down the Ugambi became a horrible nightmare. Now abreast of him, now lost in the jungle for hours, only to reappear upon his trail, the dreadful horde raced after him, reducing him from a strong man to an emaciated, fear-gibbering thing long before the ocean broke upon his hopeless vision. Nowhere had he seen Jane Clayton.

To him there seemed little doubt Jane had been captured by warriors from the villages she must pass on her way down to the sea. The sight of the mouth of the Ugambi filled Rokoff with renewed hope. There on the placid water of the bay floated the Kincaid at anchor. Frantically he paddled toward her, shouting loudly to attract the attention of the men he had left on board. Yet no answer came from the silent craft!
